3 DIE IN 50-FT. AUTO PLUNGE

PARTY HURLED TO R. R. TRACKS AS CAR LEAPS OFF VERMONT BRIDGE

White River Junction, Vt., Aug. 25.—Two girls and a man, all of Springfield, Mass., were instantly killed today, and another man, from the same city, was badly injured in a 50-foot plunge of an automobile from a bridge in Hartland.

The car crashed on the tracks of the Central Vermont Railroad, the impact reducing it to a tangle of wood and metal amid shattered glass.

Killed in the fall were:

Thomas G. Mason, sales manager of the Pease Co., Inc., living at No. 79 North Main street, Springfield.

Miss Bertha Lacia, nineteen, No. 8 Terrace street, Springfield.

A second girl, unidentified but about twenty years old and believed to be from Springfield.

The man injured was Harry Mason of Springfield, understood to be a brother of the dead man.

Harry Mason, who was picked up unconscious, was rushed to a hospital in Hanover, N. H., where his condition was declared to be critical.

Details in the crash were meagre

HOWARD BOYS JAILED FOR KIDNAPING FATHER

Mexico City, Aug. 25 (I.N.S.).—The Howard boys are in jail again.

John and Albert Howard were arrested today and held on suspicion of having kidnaped their father, John Franklin Howard, seventy-two-year-old ex-manufacturer of Haverhill, Mass.

Since the death of the second Mrs. Howard, whom the sons allege their father married bigamously, the aged manufacturer has not been seen.

The police say the Howard boys will be held until they prove their innocence or the father is found.

Efforts of Howard's sons to get a settlement from him for their mother led to a long legal battle during which there have been charges and counter-charges, and all parties to the feud have been jailed at one time or another.

Wreath From Mussolini for Rudy

New York, Aug. 25.—Today a huge berthbound wreath, inscribed "from Benito Mussolini," was beside the casket of Rudolph Valentino. New York Fascisti announced the Premier had cabled to provide the wreath in his name.

'MESSIAH' FACES TURPITUDE BAN

New York, Aug. 25 (I.N.S.).—The Herald-Tribune says today: Efforts to keep J. Krishnamurti, Hindu Messiah, from landing in New York today from the liner Majestic were blocked temporarily when Benjamin M. Day, immigration commissioner at Ellis Island, rejected complaints that the Indian holy man is guilty of "moral turpitude."

New evidence may be produced to-day, Commissioner Day asserted, that will result in Krishnamurti's exclusion, but so far the records submitted have failed to convince Mr. Day the theosophist should be barred.

"Representations," said Commissioner Day, "have been made to me against Krishnamurti. They are directed toward barring him from this country. I examined the evidence and decided it was too flimsy for action.

"I find, from an examination of

U. S. FASCISTI LEADERS HELP COPS TO PREVENT RIOT AT RUDY'S BIER

New York, Aug. 25.—Black-shirted Fascisti and 200 police stood guard today over the body of Rudolph Valentino, lamented star of moving picture romances.

The extra guards were on duty because of the unprecedented and almost uncontrollable crowds milling about the Campbell funeral church on Forty-ninth street, near Broadway, where the body lies in state as that of Caruso and other notables have in the past.

Thousands gathered there today, in spite of the fact that 100 persons were injured late yesterday and last night, when more than 100,000 (police estimate) fought with police reserves for a glimpse of the features of the dead star.

Valentino's Story of His Life

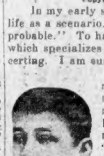
By Rudolph Valentino

Chapter I. Under Italian Skies

(Reprinted from Photoplay Magazine by permission of James R. Quirk, the editor. Copyright, by Photoplay Publishing Company.)

In my early studio days I once tried to sell the story of my life as a scenario. It was rejected as being "too wild and improbable." To have one's life thus characterized by a company which specializes in the most frantic serials was rather disconcerting. I am sure I prodded over the matter for some time.

Now as I try to view my own historical record with detachment I can see clearly what the scenario editor meant. The hero of my tale is not at all consistent, like a movie hero. In fact, I am not so sure he is the hero. At times he has all the appearances of the "heavy." Yet, again, he seems to have good impulses, which a movie villain never has.



AS A BOY.

Naturally sensitive and inclined to introspection, I have tried above all else to know myself. But when we take what we call a "long shot" at that self, starting forth in the world from a poor little village in the heel of Italy, traveling curious ups and downs in early life and vacillating between occupa-

GIRLS BUY DOPE; $25,000 BAIL

The highest bail ever fixed in a "dope peddler" case, in lower court, was assessed in Central Court against Moses Graham, of No. 28 Albion street, South End.

Graham is alleged to have been selling cocaine to young girls of the "flapper" age in the South End, and fifty grains were found in his possession when arrested, according to the police.

He was held for the Grand Jury in $25,000 bail, but on top of that suspended sentence to Concord Reformatory that was hanging over him was revoked and he was sent to Concord while awaiting action by the Grand Jury.

STRIKERS SCOR MANVILLE BID

Providence, Aug. 25 (A.P.).—One thousand strikers of the Manville mill of the Manville-Jenckes Company unanimously rejected the peace offer of the company at a mass meeting today because the company refused to discharge four out-of-town loom fixers.

The company and the strikers are in agreement on all points save this. According to Horace A. Riviere, organizer for the United Textile Workers of America, the next move is up to Federal Conciliator Richard K. Brown.

'MYSTERY GIRL,' LOVE, RUM IN M'DADE PROBE

Testimony of a startling nature concerning a wild drinking party featured by love scenes and alleged advances made toward the wife of a prison officer and a mysterious "Miss Blank," was given today at the Deer Island hearing of Major James H. McDade, deposed deputy master.

The testimony was given by Paul J. Campbell, assistant deputy master, at the hearing granted by Master James L. Malley at his residence on Deer Island.

Those present included Penal Institutions Commissioner Philip A. Chapman, Samuel Silverman, assistant corporation counsel who acted as prosecuting officer; Atty. Silas

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Aug. 25 (A.P.).—The ashes of Mrs. Grace Talbot Cumnock, who died suddenly in Brussels, are being brought home by her niece, Mrs. Darley Raudall, the sculptress, on the steamship France. Mrs. Cumnock was a daughter of Thomas Talbot, twice governor of Massachusetts.

The ashes will be placed in Young's Memorial Cemetery near

LEADERS JOIN IN LAST HONORS TO PRES. ELIOT

While all departments of Harvard University were closed and their activities halted today, the body of President-Emeritus Charles W. Eliot arrived in Boston for the funeral this afternoon in Cambridge.

At Northeast Harbor, Me., where the distinguished educator died at his Summer home, services were held yesterday, after which the remains were started on the trip to the Hub for Dr. Eliot's last return to the University.

When the gray casket arrived at the North Station at 9:40, daylight time, on the Bar Harbor train, it was accompanied by Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, only son, and his wife; Charles W. Eliot, second, a grandson; Mr. and Mrs. Roger Pierce, the latter a granddaughter; Mrs. Samuel Eliot, Mrs. Richard Paine and Miss Ellen Eliot.

A spray of goldenrod, a wreath of fir twigs and another spray of wild flowers that were favorites of Dr. Eliot, were atop the casket.

INJURED FLIER CRAWLS 5 HOURS UNTIL FOUND

Bellefonte, Pa., Aug. 25 (A.P.).—Lieutenant Cyrus K. Bettis, army flying ace, missing since Monday, was brought to the Centre County Hospital here today with a broken leg and fractured skull.

Lieutenant Bettis crawled for five and one-half hours through the tangled underbrush until he came to a roadway, where he was later found by two State highway employes.

Whether the aviator suffered any other serious injury could not be learned until after a thorough examination is made. Because of his injuries he was not permitted to talk when brought in.

A report from Lewistown said the army flier was found on the north side of Jack Mountain, five miles from that town. A plane was seen to fall by a farmer's wife and a search was made of the south side of the mountain yesterday without success.

Later, according to a report from Lewistown, two young farmers found the wrecked plane on the north side on a flat area of ground.

Lieutenant Bettis with two other planes left the Reconnaissance at Philadelphia on Monday for Selfridge Field in Michigan to prepare for the air races in Philadelphia next month. Near Lewistown the aviators ran into a thick fog Monday afternoon and that was the last seen of Lieutenant Bettis until he was found.

Have You Heard of Heinecken? Why Not OUR Courts? Ford, Hemp and Sloan Mourning for Valentino

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1926, by the Star Co., Inc.

YOUNG KRISHNAMURTI from India arrives today and comes to free us from our "materialism." He will be as welcome as Hercules in the Augean stables.

THIS EARNEST, sincere youth is, among other things, an excellent horseman, a good sportsman, and was an infant prodigy. He was carried each night to a tent to his sleep. As he dreamt, so his friends say, "The Master" appeared and gave him instructions. At the age of twelve he wrote his book, "At the Feet of the Master."

THAT DOES NOT necessarily mean Divine inspiration. Consider little Christian Heinrich Heinecken, who died in 1735, "before he was five years of age." He was able to converse plainly at ten months. When one year old, he knew by heart the most important parts of the Pentateuch. At two years of age he had mastered sacred history; at three he was thoroughly acquainted with history and geography, ancient and modern, sacred and profane, and spoke French and Latin. He devoted himself to religious study in his fourth year, and to church history. And this is no "yarn," but

NEW YORK FASCISTI JOIN POLICE ON GUARD AT VALENTINO'S BIER TO STOP RIOTS

Most of the injured were women and three of them policemen. They were deluged with fragments of plate glass windows that had been pushed in or injured in the rioting in the streets.

Sidewalks and streets were littered with pocketbooks, umbrellas, furs and women's shoes when the doors of the chapel were closed at midnight and the police chased, or rather tried to chase, the people home.

As an aftermath of the rioting two married women were arraigned for court today. Both received suspended sentences and reprimands from Magistrate Goodman.

One refused to give her name, saying she did not want her children to know of her plight, but she was identified by police as Mrs. Irene Comer, thirty-six, of No. 426 Central Park West. The other, Mrs. Sarah Kaplan, thirty, of No. 213 East One Hundred and Thirty-Ninth street, was accused of refusing to obey police who tried to force her into line.

Long before 8:30 o'clock, when the doors of the funeral church were reopened today another throng began to assemble. By 8 o'clock it had reached several thousands.

The body today had been removed from the "gold room" on the second floor to the funeral chapel on the first floor. When the doors reopened the crowd began to file in rapidly and passed the casket at the rate of thirty-five a minute. The crowd was distinctly more orderly. It was estimated that 50,000 persons, at least, would view the body today. The chapel will remain open till midnight.

Two hundred police reserves, picked men from every precinct in the city, stood guard outside to prevent a repetition of yesterday's disorder.

The riotous scenes enacted at the funeral church were without precedent in New York, in the opinion of the police. Frank Campbell, proprietor of the chapel and a veteran undertaker said:

"I have never seen anything like it. I had something to do with the funeral of President Grant, and we thought we had huge crowds to handle, but it was nothing like this."

Counts made during the night showed that the line of people were passing the coffin, where Valentino lay in peaceful repose, at the rate of 150 a minute, or 9,000 an hour. The people filed by from 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon until midnight when they almost caused another riot when men were sent out with megaphones notifying them that the doors were closed.

POLICE HEAD IN CHARGE.

Police Commissioner George McLaughlin took personal charge of police arrangements today.

The persons filing past the coffin today made a curious scene. In the long line were women of all classes and men who aped the "sheik" type as played by Valentino on the screen.

Some of the women blessed themselves, others genuflected. A few, hysterical, stuffed handkerchiefs in their mouths and hurried by.

Others hung entranced until gently pulled away by special ushers with the admonition "keep moving."

"More than one woman tried to kiss Valentino's face only to find that it had been protected from the public by unbreakable glass.

Some wept, but for the most part it was a curious rather than a sympathetic or condolatory crowd.

Valentino's face was handsome, though somewhat drawn, in repose. One-half of the coffin was closed with bronze, the other half with a thick plate of glass, showing the face, but placing it beyond touch.

At one end of the casket flowers were laid. At the other stood a cast of the Virgin Mary. A candle burned at the head and another at the foot, and behind wavered a dim flame of the red vigil light, at the foot of a small bronze crucifix.

No change had been made today in the plan to hold the funeral service next Monday at St. Malachi's Church, although an International News Service dispatch from Paris carried a request from Alberto Guglielmi, brother of the dead screen star, that the funeral be delayed until he gets to America. He left today for the United States man said, it is in Los Angeles.

Ad Tells Public Valentino Is Dead

Despite the prominence of Rudolph Valentino and the hundreds of columns devoted to his illness, death and aftermath, in the newspapers of the world, the following paid funeral notice appears in all the New York newspapers today:

DEATH NOTICES.

VALENTINO RUDOLFO—Reposing at the Campbell Funeral Church, Broadway at 66th St. Solemn high requiem mass at St. Malachy's Church, Monday, August 30, at 11 A. M. Adultmass by card only.

on the White Star Liner Homeric.

It has not been definitely decided whether the body will be finally laid to rest in Hollywood, Cal., where Valentino achieved his fame, or returned to his home town, Castellaneta, Italy.

General belief is that it will be taken to Hollywood, although the wishes of Alberto Guglielmi will largely determine the disposition of the remains.

Valentino's pictures, it was announced, will be shown on the screen. It was pointed out that Valentino had a large interest in several pictures and if they were withdrawn the beneficiaries of his estate would be deprived of these profits.

No details of Valentino's personal estate have been learned. If he left a will, his manager, B. George Ullman, said today for the burial in the city where he made his fame and success.

Adolph Zukor, head of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, said: "Only two weeks before his death I had lunch with Mr. Valentino and he spoke of his love for California. It is believed his brother will want him buried in this country. There is little doubt of that. Los Angeles will be the place. There could be no other place."

"It seems fitting that his last resting place should be in the California he loved so well."

BROTHER HOLDS UP FUNERAL

Paris, Aug. 25 (I.N.S.).—Prior to his departure for New York, Alberto Guglielmi, brother of Rudolph Valentino, said today that he would not make a final decision as to the burial place of his brother until he reached New York.

"I am consulting my sister in Turin," he said. "I can not make a decision before I reach New York as there are so many factors to be considered."

Yesterday Alberto stated that he did not feel that the body should be brought back to Turin for burial, but should be laid at rest in the America which Rudolph had loved.

Before boarding the Homeric at Cherbourg, Guglielmi, informed by International News Service of the desire of Californians that Valentino be buried there, was deeply appreciative.

"They are very kind," he said, "but I hope they won't insist upon my making any decision immediately.

"I must await a reply from my sister, and even if she approves burial in California, I would prefer to make my decision after arriving in New York."

Million Becomes 80

Vienna, Austria, Aug. 25 (A.P.)—Hungary today began chopping off the useless ciphers from its currency with the issuance of kronen notes surcharged with their value in the new currency, the "pengo." Thus a 1,000,000 kronen note is now surcharged with its value of 80 pengos.

Holywood Tomb for Rudy Urged by Pola Negri

Los Angeles, Aug. 25 (I.N.S.).—Her heart heavy with grief, Pola Negri, beautiful Polish film star, leaves here at noon today for New York, where she will meet Alberto Guglielmi, brother of the dead Rudolph Valentino, when Alberto arrives on the steamer Homeric.

She will try to persuade the brother that "Rudy's" body should be buried in Hollywood, in the city and State he loved.

"I am sure that Rudolph wished it," Sydon quoted Miss Negri as saying.

Eyton, himself a close friend of Valentino, was positive the "sheik" personally would desire a California burial.

John W. Considine, Jr., president of the Producing Company of United Artists, which handled Valentino pictures and also close personal friend, declared, "I believe it would be more in keeping with Valentino's real wishes if he were buried here rather than in Italy. Hollywood was the scene of his greatest triumphs and his greatest happiness."

This feeling is concurred in by other leaders in New York, who said so to the New York American.

S. George Ullman, Valentino's manager, said: "The suggestion that the body be sent to Los Angeles for burial is one in which I concur heartily. As a matter of fact, I have been bending every effort towards this end and am only waiting now for Rudolph's brother to arrive. He, of course, must make the decision, but I feel sure Rudolph's friends and associates will be able to convince him of the genuine feeling

McNAB WARNS McADOO ON "TAMMANY ISSUE"

San Francisco, Aug. 25.—Gavin McNab, who was the Western adviser of the Wilson administration and is recognized as a leading Democrat of California today in a letter to William Gibbs McAdoo asserted that the "Tammany Hall" issue raised by McAdoo's candidacy for Senator in this State was "melodramatic nonsense."

"I have no personal interest in these contests," observed McNab, "nor can I know, nor do I pretend to predict who will win. But I do know that it is unbecoming a candidate for President to engage in local political squabbles."

BOYHOOD PALS MOURN RUDY

Castellaneta, Italy, Aug. 25 (I.N.S.) Flags are at half-mast in this little Italian town—the home of Rudolph Valentino's kin. When news of his death came the townspeople hastened to convey their condolences to the film star's sister. She was about to be wed, but the news that came over the cables has driven thought of marriage from her mind.

A move is already under way here to raise a fund by popular subscription to erect a monument to the memory of the "Sheik."

Expressions of grief are universal, but there is also tremendous interest in the Valentino fortune. Nearly everyone believes that the estate will "make millionaires" of Valentino's brother and sister.

Childhood friends of Rodolfo Guglielmi recall incidents of his youth. One story concerned his impetuosity, which characterized his later career in the films. On the death of a boyhood companion, the story went, Rodolfo was denied the wish to act as a pall-bearer. He did not accept that decision, but fought his way to the funeral. His father saw him and reprimanded him. Rodolfo went home and cooled his ardor by pacing up and down the roof of his house.

His first sweetheart, townspeople recalled, died when she was seventeen years old. Rodolfo was then the same age. That was a year before he sailed for America. The boy had no money to buy her flowers, but it is still recalled that at her funeral he appeared with a large bouquet of assorted blossoms.

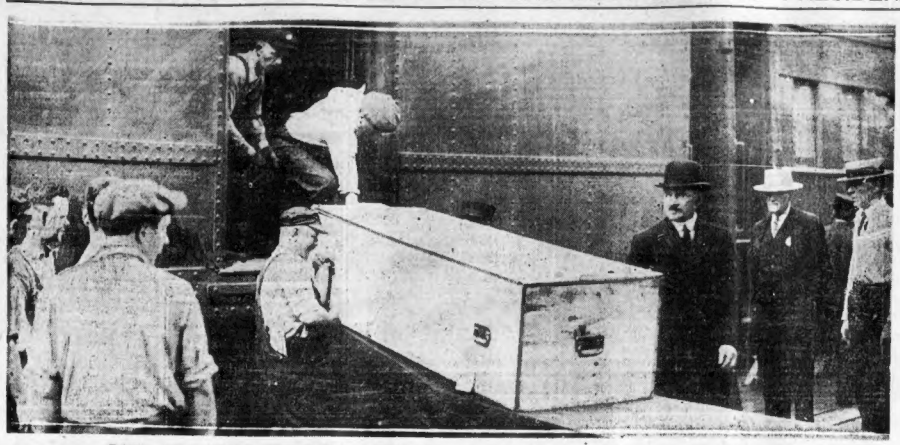
CHARLES W. ELIOT, CALLED THE GREATEST HARVARD PRESIDENT, GOES TO HIS FINAL REST TODAY



BODY OF FAMOUS EDUCATOR ARRIVING AT NORTH STATION IN LAST JOURNEY
Accompanied by relatives, the remains of Harvard's former president reached this city early today from Northeast Harbor, Me., where the noted educator died. The body was at once removed to Cambridge, where funeral services were held this afternoon in Appleton Chapel. The services were attended by scores of leaders in civic and educational circles, including many noted graduates of Harvard.

CALLES TO BAR PRIESTS WHO OPPOSED HIM

Mexico City, Aug. 25. (A.P.)—The newspapers today print statements attributed to official circles saying that the government has decided that whenever Catholic priests attempt to resume church services the government will refuse permission to do so to each priest who is known to have opposed the government and the religious laws.

It is said the Department of the Interior has stenographic reports of the sermons of all priests throughout the country since discussion of the present religious situation began and thus knows who have spoken in opposition to the laws.

Mexican Congress May Meet Without Senate

Mexico City, Aug. 25 (A.P.)—Mexico's hectic Congressional politics may result in the new Congress which convenes September 1 being without a Senate, says El Universal Grafico.

Until recently, declares the newspaper, it appeared probable that there would be two rival chambers of deputies, each claiming the right to function. At present this difficulty seems to have been smoothed over, although the electoral college is still attempting to decide contests over seats arising out of the July 4 elections.

El Universal Grafico asserts that the Senators declared to have been elected in thirteen of Mexico's twenty-seven states will not be accepted by the minority parties in the Senate, composing the "revolutionary Democratic bloc" and that this will prevent a two-thirds quorum in the upper chamber, without which the Senate cannot meet. The newspaper adds that in this event the deputies have to meet without A Senate until President Calles calls special State elections for the choosing of new Senators.

Sheffield Sees Kellogg on Mexican Problems

Washington, Aug. 25 (A.P.)—Mexico's present troubles, particularly her dispute with the United States over the new land and oil laws, were discussed today at a conference between Secretary Kellogg and Ambassador Sheffield, just home from the Mexican capital.

The ambassador brought with him to the State Department any first-hand details of the religious controversy in the Southern Republic, and exact information about the attitude of the Calles government on this and other questions now disturbing Mexico city officials.

Nominally in the United States on vacation, Mr. Sheffield made his report to the State Department his first duty. Later he probably will be President Coolidge at the Summer White House at Paul Smith's' New York.

AMERICAN TOURISTS RUSHING TO RUSSIA

Leningrad, Russia, Aug. 25 (A.P.)—Not since pre-war days have there been as many tourists in Russia as there are now. Local authorities have been forced to provide accommodations for travelers in private houses.

Nearly 400 South American tourists have arrived, bringing the number from North and South America alone to almost 500. The tourists were surprised to find upon landing that the country is calm and orderly.

The government has let down the bars against the entry of foreigners, especially Americans. The government has relaxed its passport and has given orders to all frontier and customs authorities to be as accommodating and lenient as possible to Americans.

SAM'L APPLETON DIES 'DEAN OF RISK MEN'

Samuel Appleton of No. 275 Marlboro street, the man who introduced employers' liability insurance in this country, and who amassed a fortune after losing everything in the fire of 1872, died today at his Summer home, Broadmere, at Peaches Point, Marlboro.

Mr. Appleton, the dean of casualty insurance writers in America, was born in New York 81 years ago. He came with his parents to Boston a few years later and at 15 went to work in a Boston importing house. In 1867 he entered the insurance business and became secretary of the Exchange Fire Insurance Company. The great Boston fire wiped out all his gains, and several years of hard struggle for a livelihood followed.

Persevering against discouraging odds, he became president of the Commonwealth Fire Insurance Company but left this concern in 1882 to accept the presidency of the Manufacturers' Fire and Marine Insurance Company.

He reached the pinacle of success in 1886 when he was appointed general agent for the Employers' Liability Assurance Corporation, Ltd., of London. He promoted this form of insurance so successfully that he was made United States manager, a position he held until his death.

At the time of his death he was also chairman of the board of directors of the Employers' Fire Insurance Company of Boston.

A daughter, Miss Maude E. Appleton, survives.

'LOVE PILL' GIRL VICTIM OF BOY'S 'DRUG MANIA'

Cleveland, Aug. 25 (A.P.).—The mania of her youthful sweetheart for administering medicines is seen by authorities as the only plausible reason for the death Sunday of pretty Dorothy Kirk, twenty-one-year-old stenographer, who it is believed, died as result of overdoses of potions given her by Emil Balanescu, twenty-one, her suitor.

This theory has gained weight as questioning of the youth has delved further into the strange relations of the pair, and as examination of the girl's stomach by Coroner A. P. Hammond and City Chemist Harold J. Knapp has proceeded.

Balanesco, according to police, has admitted prescribing medicines for the girl, "just to cheer her up." So numerous were the pills and other medicines taken by the girl that chemists working under Dr. Knapp have pronounced the girl's stomach a "veritable store house of drugs."

So far as has been learned no poisons were given Miss Kirk, and it might be necessary to attribute her death to an indiscriminate conglomeration of medicines, it was said.

Examination of the girl's stomach failing, authorities have been forced to search for further information concerning her strange illness by questioning the youth.

Between sobs he has told of his desire to help the girl, whom he says he loved. He had no intention, he says, according to police, of making Miss Kirk ill, much less of causing her death.

NEW TARIFF BOARD MEN MUST WAIT PAY

Washington, Aug. 25 (A.P.).—S. R. Brossard and Sherman J. Lowell, members of the tariff commission, who were given recess appointments by President Coolidge after Congress failed to act on their nominations, cannot draw pay until they have been confirmed by the Senate, Comptroller-General McCarl has ruled.

Mr. McCarl relied on the law which declares no appointee can be paid salary for a recess appointment if the vacancy existed during the session of Congress.

QUIZ BUILDING INSPECTOR IN 'GRAFT' PROBE

The $2,000,000 city graft investigation took a new turn today when District Attorney O'Brien interviewed George K. Watson, a city building inspector, at his office, this making the first time that the building department has been linked in any way with the inquiry.

A promised sensation announcement in the probe was delayed and the reason was said to be the failure of an important witness, whom the investigation authorities wished to question, to appear at the district attorney's office.

An important event in the inquiry was a long conference at which Edwin L. Pride, certified public accountant, who with 20 assistants made an examination of records at City Hall, was present together with O'Brien, Assistant District Attorney Alpert and Assistant District Attorney Calahan.

During the conference the promised sensation was eagerly awaited at the courthouse, where it was current talk ha h bissies tof it would be, at least in part, an official report made by Accountant Pride.

The latest visit of Accountant Pride was marked by unusual activity and caution on the part of all concerned. It was admitted that the three members of the City Council interviewed by District Attorney O'Brien would be summoned before the Grand Jury.

They are Councillors Frederick E. Dowling of Brighton, John J. Dowd of Roxbury and Thomas W. McMahon of Dorchester.

4 KILLED WHEN SPEEDING AUTO HIT TREE

Bridgeport, Ct., Aug. 25.—Four are dead, one is dying, and two others suffered painful injuries, the result of a fast automobile ride through a fog bank that hovered over Nichols road, on the Shelton Highway.

Travelling at about fifty miles an hour, a sedan, seven boy passengers aboard, plunged headlong into a giant tree and was totally wrecked.

Leonard Manero, 19, Carlo Morturi, 19, a boy believed to be Louis Pekar, 17, and an unidentified boy, all of Bridgeport, were dead on arrival at the Bridgeport Hospital.

Stanley Allenovica, 18, of Bridgeport, is dying at the hospital. One of the remaining two injured is believed to be William Pekar, brother of the boy who was killed. The other is unidentified.

William Pekar, the police are informed, was the driver of the machine. The crash occurred when the group was returning to Bridgeport via Nichols road and the Shelton Highway. The thoroughfare extends between Bridgeport and the town of Nichols.

The bodies of those who were killed were badly mangled. Three of them died almost instantly. The other succumbed at the hospital.

Dead and injured were lodged so securely in the wreckage that it was necessary to use a chop into the tree to extricate them. Both policemen and firemen were summoned.

Nichols road, an all cement highway, was torn up for several feet around the scene of the collision.

Police are conducting a rigid investigation to determine how the accident happened. They will question William Pekar, alleged driver of the machine, as soon as he is sufficiently recovered to be interviewed, and will do likewise with the others who are able to talk.

2 HUB VESSELS ASHORE IN FOG

Two Boston vessels ran aground in the heavy fog that endangered transportation all along the Massachusetts coast during the night.

Two Coast Guard cutters and a dozen patrol boats scoured the sea for the steamship Steel Navigator when she was reported grounded off Cape Cod, near Pollock Rip lightship, but before they found her the vessel was floated by the rising tide.

The tug Margaret A. Howard underwent a similar experience. She Vineyard, but got off under her own power when the tide rose.

New York, Aug. 25 (A.P.).—Navigation in New York Harbor was slowed down today by an unusually heavy fog.

The incoming liner Majestic was forced to anchor in the Narrows below the quarantine station and three Long Island Sound steamers dropped their anchors off College Point. The Sound liners were the Plymouth, Priscilla and the New York.

BOY BLOCKS RAIL LINES; 'WANTED TO SEE WRECK'

Berlin, Aug. 25 (I.N.S.).—"I wanted to see a wreck," confessed a fifteen-year-old German lad, arrested today by the police after he had confessed that he placed bricks on the tracks in an effort to wreck a suburban train. The lad said he had been hearing about the Hanover wreck and wanted to see what happened when a train was derailed.

and no one had been found who witnessed the accident. It is believed the driver lost control of the sedan on the bridge.

It crashed through the side and hurtled the fifty feet to the railroad bed below.

A truck driver from Meriden, Ct., discovered the tragedy only a short time before the down express was due.

He summoned help and Harry Mason, the only one of the quartet found to live, was sent racing over the road in the car of a volunteer.

Reconstructing the tragedy, it was decided that Thomas Mason was driving the machine when it left the bridge in its death plunge.

The party is understood to have been on the way from Springfield to the Twin State Fair Grounds at White River Junction.

the complaints, no evidence that Khrishnamurti himself has been guilty of moral crimes."

What may develop into another Countess Cathcart case, with ironical religious obequities, began when foes of Krishnamurti ransacked the record and found that his former tutor, "Bishop" Charles W. Leadbeater, had often been accused and had confessed to immoralities.

Krishnamurti was set apart 18 years ago by Mrs. Annie Besant and Dr. Leadbeater, bishop of the Liberal Catholic Church, to be the first vehicle of the great world faith.

MELLETT'S WIDOW SUES FOR $100,000

Cleveland, O., Aug. 25 (A.P.).—Suit for $100,000 was filed in Federal Court here by the victim's widow against the alleged conspirators in the Don R. Mellett murder.

The petition claims damages because the slaying has deprived her and her children of support. The suit was prepared in Canton after a conference with H. C. Pontius, who was attorney for Mellett, and Joseph R. Roach, Chicago criminal lawyer, conducting the murder inquiry.

'LOVE' AND RUM IN McDADE QUIZ

Field, counsel for Major McDade, and Robert Cunniffe, investigator for the Finance Commission.

CLASHES AT HEARING

Master Malloy removed McDade August 13 and Atty. Field contended he was outside his rights in so doing. He said Chapman should have presided at the hearing granted on McDade's request.

The hearing was interspersed with clashes between Silverman and Field, the latter charging that the assistant corporation counsel asked leading questions and that his witness was not being given a fair hearing.

The first witness was Campbell, who testified he had been an assistant deputy master one year and two months having previously been an officer and electrician.

He was asked by Attorney Silverman whether or not he and McDade, Mrs. Campbell and another woman were in Boston together last November. When the witness replied, "Yes," Silverman said he would not divulge the name of the other woman unless Attorney Field insisted, and would refer to her as "Miss Blank."

"CALLS DOWN" WIFE.

This being agreed to the witness was warded to refer to the woman as "Miss Blank" but instead continually spoke of her as "the other party."

"I met McDade," said the witness, "by arrangement one evening last November, at Arch and Summer streets. We went to a chop suey restaurant for something to eat, meeting my wife and the other party there.

"I left McDade at the Winthrop Beach station some hours later, having quarrelled with him at the restaurant because of his actions toward my wife. I gave my wife a caldown and told her to be careful.

"I came back to Deer Island and later my wife and the other party came also. I found a package on my doorstep shortly after I got back. It contained ginger ale, gin and crackers. Later on I found McDade left it there.

"OTHER PARTY" DRUNK.

"I was lying on the couch at my house when the other party entered with my wife. Ten minutes later there was a knock on the door and McDade entered. We all had several drinks of gin and ginger ale. Then the other party was going under.

"She was going under the influence of liquor when my wife prepared to put her to bed. McDade came into the bedroom to say good night to this party. My wife put the party to bed and came out. McDade remained in the room. My wife started to cry and we went into the kitchen.

"Five minutes later McDade came out and said the party had fainted. He seemed to be in total dope. He was bleary-eyed and wild looking."

At this point the witness hesitated and on being questioned said the happenings were of such a nature that he did not care to relate them. He was requested to do so and complied.

"I went into the bedroom and picked up the other party. She was unconscious. McDade disappeared. The only place he could have gone was out a window. He had some of his clothes on and carried the remainder."

The witness said he met McDade the next day, the deputy master asking how the "other party" was.

Campbell said he told the deputy master that she was all right. In response to questions he said he had never seen McDade under the influence of liquor at any other time but did see him drink gin and ginger ale once at a birthday party.

73,500,000 Phone Calls Daily in United States

Harrisburg, Aug. 25 (I.N.S.).—More than 73,500,000 completed calls are made over the telephone lines of the United States every day, says the Pennsylvania Public Service Information Committee in making known the result of a survey today.

Seventy-one million of these conversations are local calls and the other two and one-half million are recorded over the toll and long distance lines.

Approximately 370,000 persons are needed to take care of the telephone plant and equipment, and to conduct its business and handle those calls.

when it was transferred to the Hearse.

As a final tribute to the savant, all Harvard suspended activities today and its buildings were closed to the public. Through Mayor Quinn of Cambridge, all city work was ordered halted in the vicinity of the university during services.

The body of President Eliot, on arriving in Boston by express train, was taken to the funeral parlors of Benjamin F. Wyeth in Boylston street, Cambridge. From transfer later to Appleton Chapel in the college yard close by.

Funeral services were set for 2:30 p. m., with doors opening an hour earlier to accomodate the throng.

For representatives of the University, of Cambridge and Boston as cities, of the State and of various civic organizations, seats were reserved in Appleton Chapel with the public being accommodated as far as possible in whatever seats remain.

Following services of an hour in the chapel, the body will be taken to Mt. Auburn Cemetery for burial, all the pall bearers being nephews of Dr. Eliot.

Governor Fuller, Mayor Quinn of Cambridge and Mayor Nichols of Boston will be present officially at chapel services conducted by the Rev. George A. Gordon, Harvard '81, pastor of the Old South Church.

The honorary pallbearers, Fellows of Harvard College, will be Charles Francis Adams, James Byrne, Charles P. Curtis, John F. Moors and Dr. Henry P. Walcott.

The head usher will be Jerome D. Greene of New York, with the following ushers:

Dr. Walter B. Cannon, Dr. David A. Cheever, George W. Cram, secretary of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences; Professor Edwin F. Gay, Dean Chester N. Greenough, John G. Hart of the English department, Francis W. Hunnewell of Wellesley, William C. Lane, librarian of the Widener Library; Professor Theodore Liman, Dean Clifford H. Moore, Professor Robert DeWard; Professor Warren, Edgar H. Wells of New York, Professor James Hardy Ropes.

HURLED 50 FEET BY TRAIN

Hurled fifty feet by a Boston-bound express near Hingham Station today, a man believed to be George Cleary, Hingham hotel employe, was instantly killed and his body mangled almost beyond recognition.

A temporary finding of accidental death was made by Medical Examiner Peterson, but he began a further investigation of the case.

Cleary was seen walking on the track just before the train hit him and he was apparently paying no attention to it, according to witnesses on the station platform.

Studios Mourn Rudy as Beloved Friend

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25.—The shock of Rudolph Valentino's death is felt in every film studio. Nothing else is discussed. Knots of directors, and little groups of players congregate and talk in hushed tones now and then, reminiscing over some episode in his colorful life.

As for news, there just isn't any. No one seems to have the heart to go on with personal plans. Any talk of coming productions or new stars is invariably met with a discussion of Rodolph Valentino and what a loss his passing is to the film colony.

The rest of the world lost a fine actor and a popular idol, but to the film colony in every eye and a choke in every voice, a beloved friend is gone.

Irene Rich

THE ADVENT OF THE VITAPHONE into the life of Warner Brothers seems to have started a rumor that productions in their studios were on the wane. This has not only been denied but substantiated by a long list of pictures to be made at the Warners studios.

In that list I notice "The Climbers," Clyde Fitch's play, mentioned with Irene Rich and Conway Tearle in the leading roles.

"Black Ivory" is another interesting announcement. This, with "Noah's Ark," will probably be Warners' biggest special for 1926-27. Both of these pictures are being planned for filming with the Vitaphone, and will be given special presentation.

There are about five or six othere productions planned by Warners.

BEN TURPIN IS SMILING AGAIN. He has a new and beautiful leading woman. A dark-eyed vamp will try her wiles on him in all forthcoming comedies to be made by the cross-eyed comedian for Mack Sennett.

Turpin was inconsolable when Mack Sennett announced that Madeleine Hurlock, his leading woman for three years, would be starred in her own picture. I almost forgot to say the new vamp is Alma Bennett.

THE FOX COMPANY is much excited over the advent of a young girl named Betty Miller. Betty drifted into the studio and came out so well in the tests that she was given an important role in "The City."

In fact, it was whispered for a time that they were considering her for the lead in "The Seventh Heaven," but this was vociferously denied at the Fox Studios.

U. S. SENDS NEW TACNA, ARICA OFFER TO CHILE

Santiago, Chile, Aug. 25 (A.P.).—The Chilean government has received a communication from Dr. Miguel Gruchaga, ambassador to the United States, containing a new proposal, reported to have been made by Frank B. The proposal is understood to be that Tacna be given to Peru, that a corridor to the sea, extending ten kilometers north of Arica be awarded to Bolivia, and that the remainder of the disputed territory, including the Arica-La Paz Railroad, be given to Chile.

MORE POLICE GOING TO BRITISH MINES

London, Aug. 25 (A.P.).—Reports of intimidation of miners seeking to return to work in the coal fields are understood to have caused the British home office to make preparations to move considerable bodies of police from London and other areas to the affected districts.

A large number of extra police have been moved into the Mansfield district.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

The Philip K. Browns of Boston Now on Way Home From Hawaii

MR. AND MRS. PHILIP K. BROWN came ashore yesterday at San Francisco, en route from Honolulu, and soon will be steaming eastward on the last portion of their long and interesting honeymoon journey. They are coming to the North Shore as guests of the senior Browns, Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Brown, Jr., at "Red Top Farm" in Hamilton.

THE MARRIAGE of Miss Rachel Grant, of Boston and Rochester, to young Mr. Brown, Harvard 1925, was a large and imposing ceremonial staged with sumptuous display in the Old South Church in Copley square, in the Spring.

FOLLOWED A LONG wedding journey, Mr. Brown, taking his pretty bride to Honolulu where the Browns, both the bridegroom and his parents, have hosts of friends due to several previous journeys to the tropical islands.

MR. AND MRS. BROWN, JR., will be at the North Shore for several weeks, until the new menage is established in Memorial Drive, Cambridge. Mrs. Brown, as Miss Rachel Grant, made her Boston debut only last Winter, followed by wedding bells in the Spring.

WEDDING BELLS soon to ring for Miss Gretchen Brown, fair daughter of the Brown establishment, mark a second important nuptial within the family. Miss Brown is marrying an out-of-town man, James Crossan Chaplin, 3d, of Sewickley, Pennsylvania, which means her departure to a different social environment.

MR CHAPLIN is now at "Red Top Farm" with his fiancee, suiting in a quiet two weeks of informal Summertime diversion and perfecting wedding plans, always a delightful and absorbing occupation.

A LARGE WEDDING group, ushers, bridesmaids, maid and matron of honor, will surround the sure-to-be charming bride, whose blonde good looks will be radiantly set off in gleaming bridal white. The ceremonial, at St. Paul's Cathedral is a late afternoon affair of Saturday, October 16.

PARKERS! LOOK OUT! POLICE!

Illegal parkers, especially illegal all-day parkers, will be made objectives of a new—and this time intensive—drive by the police, to begin September 1, Police Commissioner Wilson announced today.

The illegal parkers garnered in the first Fall harvest will be prosecuted vigorously, the commissioner declared, and he predicted that the drive will result in a clearing of the streets and better traffic conditions.

His order beginning the drive was sent out to captains today with the following notation:

"I ask co-operation of the citizens of this city and outlying cities and towns in this matter. Conditions will become decidedly better through active co-operation."

HURRICANE SWEEPING NORTHWARD; RAIN FOR HUB

While the monotony of continued showery weather for Greater Boston over the next 24 hours occupied most of the official weather forecasters today, attention was directed to a report of a hurricane raging in the Gulf of Mexico.

The forecast for Boston and vicinity was: Partly cloudy with probably light showers tonight and tomorrow; not much change in temperature; fresh north to east winds.

The storm raging in the Gulf of Mexico was moving northward, weather bureau officials said.

Hurricane warnings were displayed between Morgan City and Mobile, Ala.

BERLINS WILL 'HIDE INDOORS'

Alexandria Bay, N. Y., Aug. 25 (I.N.S.).—Irving Berlin and his wife, the former Ellin Mackay, plan to stay here at least until the first of September, the song writer told International News Service today.

And they'll stay indoors at the home of Max Winslow, where they are guests, if that seems necessary to avoid photographers. At Mrs. Berlin's first appearance in public the cameramen attempted to get pictures, but their efforts merely resulted in her retiring to the house in a state of hysteria.

Later Berlin intimated that he would appreciate it if the photographers would show more consideration for his wife's present condition.

"We are here for a rest, and I have some work to complete which I started in Europe," he said. "We don't want to see reporters or pose for photographers. That's not the purpose of our visit."

Berlin then invited the newspapermen to join him and Winslow in a round of golf.

DAWN 'BROKEN,' ASKS $75,000

New York, Aug. 24. — Muriel Dawn, nineteen, actress, values her broken heart at $75,000.

She brought suit today against Irving Wheeler for that amount, charging breach of promise. She says he introduced her as his "future wife."

Wheeler's attorneys say "it is all bunk and nothing but a pocket minting stunt."

BELGIUM SHIFTS ON LEAGUE

Paris, Aug. 25 (A.P.)—The Belgian government, which last year agreed to stand aside and to give its seat on the council of the League of Nations to Poland, has changed its attitude, it now appears from ex changes of notes that have been going on from time to time between European chancelries in an effort to solve the League Council tangle.

Belgium will demand re-election as a semi-permanent member under the new scheme worked out as a compromise by the commission appointed to study the council make-up.

"SILENT SILK" SAVES ONE THOUSAND TONS OF TIN

Williamstown, Aug. 25.—Because women no longer demand silk that rustles, 1,000 tons of tin are saved per year.

This amount was formerly used in weighing the silk, said H. Foster Baig, American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers.

BOMBER DIES WITH SECRET

Pittsburgh, Aug. 25 (A.P.)—The fanatic who brought death to himself and a policeman and injury to a score of persons when he exploded a bomb in the Farmers Deposit Savings Bank, carried the secret of his identity into the grave, so far as police could learn today.

Identification regarded as almost certain that the man was a maniac and escaped from a local hospital for the insane was discarded when relatives declared the bomber was not of their family. They viewed the badly mangled body at the city morgue, where hundreds have visited in a vain attempt to identify the man.

A belt buckle, on which was engraved the letter "L," was the single bit of svidence police had upon which to work.

The bomber, a man of foreign appearance, dressed in working clothes, entered the bank and presented a demand for $2,000. "or I'll blow up the bank." When George C. Ortmann, a special bank policeman, approached to arrest him he placed a black satchel upon the floor and gave it a kick. A violent explosion followed.

The bomber was instantly killed and Ortmann so badly injured he died soon after he was taken to a hospital.

SYRIAN REBELS IN NEW DRIVE AGAINST FRENCH

Beirut, Syria, Aug. 24 (I.N.S.).—The Syrian rebels have opened a new campaign against the French protectorate which appears to have widespread ramifications. The leaders of the new revolt is Sultan Atrash. He has called to his colors all Syrian tribesmen over 20 years old.

BROTHERS DROWN IN THEIR OWN LIQUOR VAT

Beaton Harbor, Mich., Aug. 25 (I.N.S.)—Sam and Frank Dimaria, brothers, were drowned when they fell into a large vat of liquor at an alcohol "cooking" plant which they were operating. The tragedy led to the discovery of the illicit distillery, said to be the largest ever seized in this section of the State.

ROTARY CLUBS ON OUTING

Members of the Dedham and Norwood Rotary Clubs, composed of business and professional men of both towns, will take a day off today to attend the annual outing at the Marion Golf Club, at Marion.

About sixty members of the Dedham Club left Memorial square, Dedham, at 9 and proceeded to Norwood, where fifty members of the Norwood Club joined them. They motored to the Cape and on arriving enjoyed an old-fashioned clambake. This was followed with a ball game, tug-of-war contest, swimming, races and trap shooting.

The members were scheduled to attend a dinner in the afternoon at the Old Colony Inn, and this will be followed with community singing led by Archie Allen of the Dedham Club and Frank Squires of the Norwood Club. After the dinner the members will return to the Marion Golf Club for several golf tournaments.

DUTCH SUB REACHES U. S ON SCIENTIFIC MISSIO

San Francisco, Aug. 25 (I.N.S.).—The Dutch submarine K-XII, which arrived here today from Holland, via the Panama Canal, is perhaps the first great submarine to substitute scientific peace for scientific warfare. Dr. F. A. Vening Meinesz, a distinguished Dutch geologist, the only civilian aboard, really commands the ship, for it is his observations which the Dutch government is chiefly interested. "By use of special apparatus I am studying the forces of gravity in various parts of the world," Dr. Meinesz explained, "in the hope of determining the exact density of the earth's crust under land and sea."

Non-Stop Fliers Stop

Paris, Aug. 25 (A.P.)—Another of the airplanes which started from the Le Bourget airdrome, near Paris in an attempt to make a new world non-stop record has been forced to land near Linz, Austria. The third plane had to descend shortly after it rose at Le Bourget.

Record Field Opens Three-Day Tourney on Worcester Links

By BILL GRIMES.

Worcester, Aug. 25.—A record field of New England's best golfers teed off today in the opening round of the Worcester three-day invitation medal and match tournament. This event, always one of the big numbers of the Summer, is one of the State's toughest tests of golf, and provides the stars with a real tryout for national amateur, which comes along next month.

There will be four flights of sixteen players, and two more if today's entrants turn in enough cards. Jack Winslow of the Worcester club, who won the event last year, was one of the favorites to show the way again. Jack has been at the top of his game for the past month.

Francis Hersey of Wellesley, medalist a year ago, was also a threat, the lengthy course being suited for his game. Ted Learned, Clark Hosmer, Charlie Crane, Emery Scranton and Tom McGinn were among the more prominent of the early starters.

Mat Title Stake of Western Bout

Los Angeles, Aug. 25 (I.N.S.)—John Pesek, "Tigerman," who gave Joe Stecher a terrific battle in a gruelling five hour match at St. Louis four months ago, will get the champion on the mat again at the Olympic Auditorium tonight, with the world's title at stake.

Pesek is admittedly a quicker moving mat man than the champion.

Stecher will outweigh the agile Pesek by some twenty pounds. Also the fact that Stechers' powerful legs are apparently in perfect condition and the champion is set to squeeze all the ambition out of Pesek with the deadly body scissors, means that the champion will be a good bet to retain the title.

TWO SCOTTISH SOCCER STARS JOIN STEELMEN

Bethlehem, Pa., Aug. 25.—Two new players that are expected to strengthen the Bethlehem Steel soccer team considerably were added to the club and will undoubtedly see action Saturday, in the exhibition game with Brooklyn on Ebbetts Field.

Pros Sent Out to Grab Coast Gridiron Star

Berkeley, Cal., Aug. 25 (I.N.S.)—With "Brick" Muller, all-American end, who turned professional to captain the Los Angeles gridiron team, en route from that city intent on signing Jimmy Dixon, halfback on the late Andy Smith's "wonder team," the former California star admitted today he would consider a professional grid offer "if it were tempting enough."

While Dixon has another year of school before he will receive his diploma, he intimated that he might forgo graduation if Muller's pro offer was a good one.

SPECIAL CLASSES FOR MEN AT BOSTON "Y"

Hundreds of athletes who train at the Huntington avenue branch of the Boston Y. M. C. A., as well as men who enter the department of health merely for exercise or pleasure, or both, are to get the benefit of additional classes during the Fall and Winter season soon starting.

In addition to a special class on feet, which meets Wednesday evenings, at 7:15, the department has decided to organize and drill special postural and abdominal classes on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, at 7:30. These classes will be for the correction of postural defects, as well as hernia conditions, and it is expected that they will be largely attended.

CHAMP TILDEN ADVANCES TO 4TH ROUND

Newport, R. I., Aug. 25 (A.P.)—William T. Tilden easily defeated his Lehigh University protege, Nell Sullivan, in the fourth round of the Newport invitation tennis tournament today, 6—2, 6—2. The victory advanced the national titleholder to the quarter-finals.

William M. Johnston and Cranston Holman, outstanding Pacific coast players, joined Tilden in the quarter-finals after brief and decisive matches, the former eliminating Lt. Carl Fischer of Philadelphia, 6—0, 6—3.

Arnold Jones, erstwhile Yale star, fell before the hard driving of Holman, 6—0, 6—4, the victory of the Leland Stanford player placing him in line for a battle tomorrow with Tilden.

Alfred H. Chapin, Jr., of Springfield, Mass., earned the right to oppose Johnston in the quarter-finals by slashing through the defense of Louis Thalheimer, flame-haired Texan, 6—4, 6—0. After an uncertain start in the first set, the New England player settled down to crush his Southern foe with powerful drives to deep court which enabled him to take the net for a dazzling fore-court attack.

The summaries:

Alfred H. Chapin, Jr., Springfield, Mass., won over Louis Thalheimer, Texas, 6—4, 6—0.

William M. Johnston, San Francisco, defeated Dr. Carl Fischer, Philadelphia, 6—0, 6—3; Cranston Holman, Leland Stanford, eliminated Arnold Jones, Boston, 6—0, 6—4.

William T. Tilden, Philadelphia, eliminated Nell Sullivan, Lehigh, 6—2, 6—2.

FIRST ROUND, DOUBLES.

Howard Langlis and Frank Shields defeated Arthur Ham and Brian Doherty, 6—4, 6—3.

Ruth Faces Herculean Job to Equal Home-Run Mark

Babe Ruth's effort to break his 1921 home run record of 59 circuit drives seems to have reached an impasse. On this date five years ago the Slam Monarch had amassed 48 circuit smacks against 49 this year. That makes him nine round trips shy of his epochal 1921 campaign.

The Yanks, according to the schedule, have 28 games to play. Ruth will be compelled to make 20 homers in these contests to equal his record. He has made his 39 homers in 122 games this season.

WISE and OTHERWISE

By STED CHANDLER

A PLAN which could well be adopted by American boxing authorities is that now used by the French Federation of Boxing. It would go a long way toward smoothing a few of the wrinkles in the fight game.

The French plan has the decision announced at the termination of each round.

Opposition to this idea is based on the fact that the fans would lose interest in a bout in which the advantage was either overwhelming or enough so as to be clearly apparent.

It would not, however, work out that way. Should a fighter lose the first five rounds of an eight-round affair, the announcement that he was five rounds behind would make him give everything he could find to uncork a knockout during the last three rounds as the only means of winning the verdict.

A boxer losing the first five rounds of a ten rounder would struggle that much harder to capture the final quintet for a draw. The tendency would be all in favor of better fights and increased interest in the audience rather than otherwise.

ST. LOUIS, which up till this year has been just a team in the National League, faces an open door to a pennant. Never before has this situation occurred.

St. Louis, be it said, appreciates this opportunity. The village which has been the joy of pop bottle manufacturers for many seasons has given way to unrestrained elation. Hats, not pop bottles, are now flying in Missouri.

The other seven National League clubs are the real teams "from Missouri" now. They are conceding the Hornsbyites nothing. Especially Pittsburgh and Cincinnati who are in the running and will be in the running until it is all over.

Rogers Hornsby told his outfit upon the eve of the series with the Braves:

"Forget that you are in first place. Forget the pennant. Concentrate on the Braves."

Excellent advice. And if the Hornsby hired men temporarily forget the pennant, the St. Louis bottle brigade may have one which will be remembered for a long time.

MOLLA BJURSTEDT MALLORY won the national tennis title for six years. The end of her rope came when Helen Wills snatched her title in 1923. They said that Molla was through. In fact, Molla, who once conquered Suzanne Lenglen, gave many indications of being through.

This year Helen's title was vacated by her unfortunate defaults. Her logical successor was Elizabeth Ryan. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory swung a vicious racquet into the picture and artistically upset the dope and the dopesters.

But Molla had something upon which to call. She had courage. Don't think that Elizabeth Ryan lacks courage; not at all. But the courage of Molla Mallory proved to be of the caliber which cannot be downed.

She is indeed seven times a champion.

CONNECTICUT BOY SWEEPS THROUGH BRITISH TOURNEY

Coombe Hill, Surrey, Eng., Aug. 25 A.P.)—Charles Sweeney, of the Canterbury School, New Milford, Conn., today entered the fourth round of the boys' amateur golf championship by defeating J. K. Walkden of Uppingham School, 6 and 5.

Young Sweeney has made a good impression among critics here who say he has a very good chance to win the trophy. He and his younger brother Robert were the only Americans entered in the championship. Robert was eliminated by G. J. Summers of Aberdeen yesterday after a hard fight which carried them to the twentieth hole.

DEMPSEY WINS FIRST ROUND FROM KEARNS

New York, Aug. 25 (A.P.)—Hearing on the motion of Jack Dempsey, through his attorneys, to have vacated two attachments secured by his former manager, Jack Kearns, in his suit against the champion for $333,333, was adjourned today by Supreme Court Justice Walsh until Friday.

Dempsey is seeking to have the attachments levied on his automobile and his bank account vacated. Arthur Driscoll, one of his lawyers, informed Justice Walsh.

"Mr. Dempsey's automobile is tied up in one attachment and they have taken out another, under which his money is also tied up, to his great inconvenience," said Driscoll.

"His account in the Harriman bank is involved. A large sum, $150,000, is jeopardized."

"Is that the $150,000," asked Justice Walsh, "which Dempsey is reported to have deposited with a bookmaker and who is reported to have said he hasn't a cent of it?"

George M. Curtis, counsel for Kearns, answered "Yes," but Driscoll said "No." He maintained a second attachment had been sworn out and he could show it was not properly issued. Curtis denied this.

Net Queen to Appear in Pro Contests on Arena Court

By STED CHANDLER

SUZANNE LENGLEN, prima donna of tennis and temperament, erstwhile queen of the amateur tennis courts and now the professional protege of Coin Crazy Pyle, will appear in Boston to play at the Arena, either Friday, October 15, or Saturday, October 16.

Colonel Bob McKirdy, local fistic impressario and pro football promoter, who will manage the French girl's Boston appearance, has given these dates out as definite. Whether it will be the 15th or the 16th will be known tonight.

McKirdy will confer with Monsignor Pyle via the telephonic route today and then the matter of Suzanne's opponents will be settled. Although this news is what the fans are primarily waiting for, there is little chance of its leaking out until the present amateur tennis season comes to a close.

McKirdy's statement sets at rest whatever fears Boston fandom may have had concerning the debut of the French star in this city. Following engagements in New York and Philadelphia, Mlle. Lenglen will make her bow here, and the village which went to the extremes of inaugurating tea parties and establishing the fame of the bean, will have the opportunity of viewing the premiere artiste of temperamental indulgence run the gamut of whatever emotions she may experience before the unabashed ogling of Massachusetts citizenry.

NEW YORK PLANS BIG WELCOME FOR GERTRUDE EDERLE

SWIMMER ARRIVES FRIDAY

Conqueror of English Channel Will Face Royal Reception From "Home Town"

New York, Aug. 25 (I.N.S.)—A welcome home demonstration, such as will rival if not surpass that accorded Bobby Jones, will be put on for the benefit of Gertrude Ederle, heroine of the recent record-breaking Channel swim, when she arrives on the Berengaria on Friday. To the shriek of whistles in the harbor and a "water salute" from a battery of fire boats, "Trudy" will be escorted ashore by a Mayor's committee of welcome and paraded proudly up Broadway to City Hall to be officially greeted and felicitated by Mayor Walker.

In spite of the fact that "Trudy" turned professional last year, fifty A. A. U. clubs plan to be represented in the line of march to city hall.

Following the mayor's greeting, a reception to New York's leading lady" will be held in the aldermanic chambers, following which the parade will be resumed to her now famous Amsterdam avenue home.

A guard of honor, composed of mounted, motorcycle and foot policemen, will accompany the swimmer on her triumphal entry, seated between her father and mother.

NINE VETS IN LINEUP OF U. S. C. GRID ELEVEN

Los Angeles, Aug. 25—As a nucleus for his 1926 grid machine, Coach Howard Jones of the University of Southern California will have thirteen men who have played on the same squad for four seasons beginning as freshmen. Nine of these will probably be in the starting lineups for each game.

These men are: Badgro and Behrendt, ends; Cox and Friand, tackles; Taylor, guard; Cravath, centre; Waer, quarter; Heisey, half; and Laraneta, full; all expected to start. The other guard will be Gorell, a two year varsity man but who was not with the others as freshmen. The remaining half will be Drury, regular last season. In addition to the nine mentioned, Thompson, half Lee, full; De Grote, tackle; and Cofman, end; have been team-mates of the others through four seasons.

Inside Story of Shelby Ticket Scandal

THIS is the thirty-ninth chapter of Jack Kearns' thrilling story in which he replies to the charges of Jack Dempsey. It is the first time that the man who put Jack Dempsey on the pugilistic map tells of his experiences when he was a grade higher. Read this story every day in the Boston Evening American.

By JACK KEARNS

WHILE I had made up my mind to get my money somehow I never did intend to call off the Shelby fight entirely. That much was known confidentially by the newspapermen mentioned yesterday no matter what the other writers were sending out to the world.

Jack Kearns

Many a fairy story found its way to the wires. Those exciting hours—it was getting closer to two in the morning. Finally I took the promoters into the bathroom for the final showdown. By this time the crowd had overflown the rooms of the two newspaper men who had turned them over to me as temporary headquarters.

The only secret chamber, therefore, was their bathroom, and it was there the promoters agreed to let me take the bout out of their hands, turn over all the money in the box office as well as the tickets. I was to get all the money that came in up to $100,000. The fight was on!

When we came out of that bathroom and announced our plans you'd have thought that Teddy Roosevelt had just come back from the Spanish American War. They tore the roof off of the place. Men came running from all floors, sleepy-eyed scribes, concession managers, left-over cowboys, oil magnates and a Blackfoot Indian or two.

I explained the situation. I was to manage the show from then on. I would take over what money existed and sell the tickets that remained in the box office.

When I got there the first thing in the morning I found the great wealth of the show had dwindled to $3000. They had already sold $300,000 worth of tickets, yet the only thing to show for it was three thousand dollars!

ATTACHMENTS ARRIVE

Everything was turned over to me. I was in line to get at least part of mine. I hadn't been in charge five minutes before the government officials came in and wanted to take hold of the affair. They also wanted to get theirs. The lumber yard man came in with his attorney and an attachment for $40,000.

It came 11 o'clock of fight day. I thought I'd hop out and see how things were going at the arena.

I found that they had provided for a single gatekeeper, not an usher or a man in any capacity. I got a lot of hangers-on together and we cleaned the arena of the rubbish the builders had left.

The first thing I did was to close three or four gates that would have been golden gates for anybody who happened to be on them. I opened a big main gate and started to sell tickets. There were thousands of people outside the arena, all eager to get in. It never occurred to them to go to headquarters for tickets.

Tickets went at $10, face value, at the start. The sad part about that was that we didn't have many at that price. I knew it was about as high as they were willing to go so I started to knock down $20 and $30 tickets to them at $10.

The visitors were keen for that and I was doing a land office business when along comes the revenue men. They stopped me right in my stride. I stopped my circus barking long enough to learn that if I sold $20 and $30 tickets for $10, I'd have to pay the face value revenue on them.

Then I made a' dicker with the revenue men. I'd sell the remaining tickets for whatever I could get and turn over a flat 10 per cent. for federal and state tax. That seemed to satisfy them for a time and in an hour's time I had taken in $70,000 in cash that ranged from nickels to $100 bills.

The federal men were not satisfied that they were getting theirs. While they were arguing, I sent my men along the barb wire fences and we sold tickets like hot cakes, right through the entanglements. Nothing had been done about getting them into the ring, so, selecting the toughest looking of the deputies I put them in charge of the dough bags and I rushed off to get the fighters going.

CROWD WAXES PEEVISH.

As I rushed here and there ordering this fellow to that and that fellow to this, the crowd growled and moaned, and every now and then some leather-lunged galoot would yell: "Lynch Kearns, lynch that blinkety blink blank bum Kearns."

Though the shivers may have trickled up and down my spine, I didn't weaken outwardly. They'd have to produce the ropes and the tree before they stopped me. I made up my mind that I'd see them through from first to last and if I was to be lynched I'd take it as part of the experience.

I feared trouble if we won and I warned Dempsey. "Get out of the arena and Shelby as soon as he's over, the quicker the better. Lose no time. Just pick up and get," I told Jack. "Win or lose, Jack, get out of here. No telling what might happen."

With that final warning he went in and won. As soon as Jimmy Dougherty raised Dempsey's hand the champion whisked himself away and I saw no more of him until we met later at Great Falls.

In tomorrow's article Kearns tells how he escaped from Shelby in a railroad caboose with Dempsey's end of the Montana fight purse.

RETAIL STORE TITLE SERIES OPENS

The championship series of the Retail Store Baseball League will get under way tonight at 8:45 at Fenway Park, which has been made available through the courtesy of Bob Quinn, Red Sox president.

By virtue of a 6 to 3 win over Gilchrist on Monday night, the R. H. White team went into undisputed possession of second place and won the right to meet the first place Houghton & Dutton team in the play-off series on which the championship will be decided in two out of three games. As an added attraction for the opening, the Filene band of thirty pieces will play during the game.

Houghton & Dutton finished the season with a standing of thirteen wins and two losses. White won eleven and lost five. Greene and McCarthy of Houghton & Dutton will oppose Murphy of White on Wednesday night in what promises to be a pitchers' battle.

The second game will be played on Friday night at 8:45 at the same place and if a third game is necessary this will be played the following Monday. A large turn-out of store fans is expected and the series will also be open to the general public.

Three Things

In LUCKY STRIKE cigarettes you get all that can be in any very fine cigarette—also the added pleasure produced by the extra process of toasting.

You get the choicest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, properly aged and perfectly blended.

But here are three additional things:

LUCKY STRIKE tobaccos are toasted for 45 minutes in superheat. This (1) removes all "bite" and harshness. It (2) develops the hidden flavors of the world's finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos. Then (3) sudden chilling seals the moist fragrance in, insuring freshness.

"IT'S TOASTED" represents a costly extra process that adds the finishing touch to a wonderfully fine cigarette.

BECAUSE IT'S TOASTED

That's Why Luckies Taste So Good

TIGERS SAY GOOD-BYE TO BOSTON AFTER TWIN BILL

COBBMEN'S LAST VISIT OF YEAR

Detroiters Will Attempt Double Win Over Red Sox in Last Appearance Today

By NICK FLATLEY

[A] WESTERN series would not seem natural at the Fenway without a Tiger double header, so the elements arranged one of those bargain affairs for this afternoon.

Ty Cobb and his striving athletes will try to walk over the Red Sox twice and thereby proceed along the trail to glory, and when the Tigers are trying they furnish a lot of baseball excitement.

It has been admitted throughout baseball for several years that the Detroit club could raise all kinds of ructions if it ever took itself seriously, and apparently the team has finally reached that stage. The visiting players are hustling, and the dash of sprint added to their tremendous socking ability makes them a really dangerous outfit for anybody to tackle.

The native Sox are due to get back on the winning way, as they have dropped three ball games in a row. This isn't in accord with their general custom, since they took the last jump into the west.

BOB QUINN is quite obtimistic as he looks over his young men and dreams of next year.

"They're all through walking on us," chirps Robert. "We will have a pretty good ball club very soon. Just let us get two or three players that we're bargaining for, and we will be pretty close to the next race.

"It looks as if some light was beginning to shine, after a long spell of darkness. This kid Regan at second is already one of the niftiest fielders in the league. He comes up with balls that look impossible. I've never seen a youngster develop so quickly before.

"He isn't hitting much yet, but he will get that as he goes along. He has lots of courage and is a smart ball player. We found something when we picked him up, and a few more breaks like that will make everything rosy."

That's a lot of optimism from President Robert, whose disposition has almost been ruined by the stormy and bitter past.

* * *

CHARLIE RUFFING and Bryan Harriss will work the double bill for the Fohls as they figure to have the stuff to quell as far as is possible the bludgeons of the foe.

WILLS PLEASED BY BOSTON RECEPTION

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Harry Wills, regarded as one of the leading contenders for the world's heavyweight boxing championship, today personally extended his thanks through the Boston Evening American to the fans for the great reception he received while in Boston.

"I was more than pleased with the wonderful reception tendered me in this city by the sporting fraternity and others, and I hope on my return at some future date to wear the heavyweight crown of the world," said Wills.

His manager, Paddy Mullins, also expressed gratitude for the splendid turn-out at the Arena. He said: "Well, you have seen Wills in the ring.

"Do you wonder why Dempsey for the last five years has been sidestepping a clash with the Brown Panther?" I am convinced Wills is in the best shape of his career. He will continue training for a possible combat with Dempsey.

After spending the greater part of today here as an honor guest of the colored Shriners and Knights Templar, the big negro challenger of "Tiger Jack" left by motor for North Adams.

Wills expected to arrive at his old training quarters in this State tonight and stay for a day or two with friends.

Next Tuesday Wills is scheduled to box four rounds at Hartford, Ct., while on Friday night he will show at Far Rockaway Beach, Long Island City, New York, in another bout of short duration.

Some five thousand or more ring worms turned to watch Harry Wills, world's champion colored heavyweight, perform in the main attraction of the Boston Arena tourney.

Babe Ruth Enjoys Four Ply Day in Contest

Babe Ruth had another four-ply day in the Hearst Popularity Contest when he stretched his lead over Helen Wills from 36 to 189 points. The respective totals are now 16,005 and 15,866.

It has all the earmarks of a great battle down the home stretch, and whereas it appears now as though the Bambino will come through a slight leader over his fair opponent, it is not a race upon which to bet money you can't afford to lose.

Helen's popularity in New England remains fixed, and in this particular area she has increased her advantage over the man who deals in home runs. The tennis luminary has 940 votes to 843 for Mr. Ruth.

Although Gertrude Ederle made a remarkably feeble start in this big contest, the rate at which she has gained has been equally remarkable, and there is little doubt but that she will finish third in the national totals and far ahead of all other swimmers.

Her landslide commenced, of course, immediately following her feat of mastering the English Channel, a stunt which won the public to the fact that she is an athlete most deserving of tribute. Her total points have reached the figure of 14,632, giving her a substantial lead over Red Grange, the Gridiron's Galloping Ghost, who is the only other star to run up more than ten thousand points. His aggregate is 11,455.

In the New England count May Elwell is still the sensation, having climbed steadily until she has surpassed the totals of such nationally known figures as Glenna Collett, Jack Dempsey, Gertrude Ederle and Charlie Paddock. She is now ensconced in fourth position with 321 ballots.

The rules are by now familiar to all. One ballot apiece; three choices; athletes to be American citizens and in active participation in sports.

Following is total vote of National Leaders in Sport popularity contest to date:

Lynn City Title Series Is Banned

The proposed post-season series between the Lynn teams of the New England Twilight league cannot be played, the national association refusing sanction.

Reasons given for the refusal are that three members of the General Electric team, Manager Tom Whelan, George Twombly and Maurice "Shorty" Doe, are not eligible to play in organized baseball. Since the New England league players come under the jurisdiction of the national association, the Lynn members would be subject to suspensions if they opposed the twilight leaguers.

Whelan is on the ineligible list for playing with black-listed players at Nashua a year ago. He is not permitted to play organized ball until next season. The trouble with the other two is that neither has received an unconditional release from teams in organized ball. Twombly is still the property of the New Haven Eastern league team and Doe of Columbia. S. C., in the Sally

PARACHUTE LANDS FLIER AND PLANE AT 25,000 FT.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 25 (A.P.)—The mammoth parachute, spreading 174 yards of silk, is the invention of Harry A. Douchett, chief naval machinist's mate. The test was made at Inglewood Airport by R. Carl Celse of the Naval Reserve, who piloted the plane, and was witnessed by 25,000 persons.

After reaching 25,000 feet, Celse stopped his motor and released the bag. For a while the plane swung from side to side, but soon steadied itself, landing about three and one-half miles west of the starting place.

PRAISE BY HIS FOES, CLAIMED BY KELIHER

Sheriff Keliher, in his house party talks in South Boston and North Dorchester, pointed to his administration and accomplishments in office, and said that even his opponents admitted he had "made good." Sheriff Keliher was enthusiastically received at each place he spoke. He is seeking nomination as Democratic candidate for re-election as Suffolk County sheriff.

Former Senator Curran, seeking the sheriff nomination, at rallies in Brighton, Hyde Park and Roslindale, said he had a letter of commendation from the New Bedford Weavers' Protective Association for his vote on the weavers' specification bill.

The skeleton of the Pickwick Club disaster rattled ominously as it was thrust into the political campaign for district attorney of Suffolk County.

FOLEY QUIZZES O'BRIEN.

William J. Foley, one of the candidates for the Democratic nomination for the office, injected the club issue by questioning the sincerity of Dist. Atty. Thomas C. O'Brien in his probe and promising to reopen the inquiry if carried into office.

Daniel J. Kane received the endorsement of the Eagle A. A. of North End club of more than 150 members. He will be the club's guest at its annual outing Sunday at Centennial Grove, Essex.

Frederick M. J. Sheehan and Attorney William C. Frost, both candidates for the same office, addressed rallies and house parties in Dorchester, Roxbury, Hyde Park and the West End.

Attorney Alexander Lincoln, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for attorney general, came out flat-footed for modification of the Volstead act and claimed the support of many "drys."

GALLIVAN DEFIANT.

Although it had been announced that Congressman James A. Gallivan would meet Senator John W. McCormack in a joint debate at Savin Hill and Dorchester avenues, tonight, the Congressman issued a statement that he will not debate on any street corner. He offered to meet McCormack at the South Boston municipal building on Broadway Saturday.

Max Waldo Cohen, Republican candidate for Congress in the ninth district, told street railway employes in Revere that he found against the nine-hour-in-eleven bill for street railway men.

KILLS PASTOR OVER WIFE

Springfield, Mo., Aug. 25 (I.N.S.)—No charge had been filed today against W. R. Leffler, contractor, who killed the Rev. Edward Gillum, 40, an evangelist, with an Indian club.

The killing occurred in the front room of the Leffler home. Leffler told authorities he returned home and found the minister and said Gillum sneered for his big pocket. Leffler grabbed an Indian club, he said, and brushed Gillum's skull.

The evangelist had been trying to "wreck" his home, Leffler told police, and the "unwritten law" will be his defense.

Leffler's story of the killing was corroborated by his wife.

TODAY

historical fact. Crowds flocked to Lubeck to see him, and a year before he died he was taken to see the King of Denmark at Copenhagen.

His death before the age of five should warn parents not to drive talented children.

IT IS SAID that President Coolidge will not tolerate or accept Europe's suggestion that we should cut our tariffs to suit Europeans at the price of our admission to the World Court.

It would be a little too silly to allow Europe to make our laws. It is bad enough and stupid enough to suggest that the United States should go before a European so-called "World Court" and abide by its decisions. Why not our OWN courts, and our OWN decisions?

HENRY FORD will plant 2,000 acres of hemp, believing that modern methods in growing and handling will make linen cheaper than cotton, in proportion to wear.

Hemp fields, however, will not keep Henry Ford from watching Mr. Sloan of the General Motors Company, who plans to put out one million copies of a cheap car in 1927. When you speak of "a million cheap cars" Ford forgets all about hemp, and the reason to.

An income of a hundred millions a year "is not a thing to laugh to scorn."

THOUSANDS CROWDING yesterday to view the remains of Rudolph Valentino lying in state broke the plate glass windows of the mortuary chapel. One hundred, nearly all women, were injured. No death since that of Lincoln has caused the public excitement produced by the death of this great film star.

When his death was announced, women in tears crowded around newsstands to buy the latest edition.

SOME PROFESS amazement at this interest. Even Cyrus H. K. Curtis' newspaper says that the interest in Valentino's death "gives the observer an uneasy sense of unfamiliarity with American values."

Mr. Curtis should be the last to say that. One of the greatest of American values is PUBLICITY. In this country one hundred and thirty millions every week pay for admission to moving picture theatres, and tens of millions feel that in Valentino they have lost a friend.

TWO NEW IDEAS in prohibition enforcement. "Shoot to kill" orders are sent to prohibition officers, particularly to a squad of forty customs men recently appointed for special bootleg work.

If the bootleggers run away they are to be shot—dead if possible.

ALSO THE GOVERNMENT will divide the receipts from fines imposed on bootleggers. The informer will get one-quarter of what the government gets.

This shows energy, but will it discourage men that can change one dollar's worth of corn into fifty dollars' worth of bootleg whiskey?

NOTHING NEW from Mexico except that there is no agreement between the Catholic Church and the Mexican government. The Vatican issued through the Papal secretary of state an official statement, warning the public against inaccurate news concerning the Mexican controversy.

CROWDS VISITING the great cathedral from which priests are absent say they have seen what they call "the ghosts of bishops flitting about" and believe that they have returned to protect the church treasures.

The police are investigating, fearing that thieves have assumed the role of pseudo-bishops.

OHIO TO VOTE ON REPEAL OF PRIMARY LAW

Columbus, O., Aug. 25 (A.P.)—The Ohio Republican party today stood pledged to carry before the voters a plank for repeal of the State primary law. The declaration, adopted by the platform committee of the State convention is a pledge and declares nothing will be done toward repeal if it is not ratified by the voters.

The Democratic platform adopted committed the party against repeal of the primary system. The Democrats declared for enforcement of the prohibition laws and the Republicans' Platform Committee has recommended a similar stand for that party.

NEGRO MASONS PARADE WITH 3,000 IN LINE

Three thousand Shriners, attending the national convention of colored Masons here, today marched in a glittering parade through the main thoroughfares of the city and were reviewed by the Governor, the Mayor and their national officers.

Thirty temples and twelve patrols were represented in the long line of gaily uniformed marchers, swinging along jauntily to the lilting music of five bands.

Governor Fuller reviewed the parade from the State House. The Mayor's party witched the column from a position in front of the City Hall. Imperial Potentate Caesar H. Blake, the imperial divan and officers reviewed the marchers in front of the Boston Public Library.

DRILL TEAMS COMPLETE.

The marchers assembled shortly after noon at Douglas square. The line of march was down Tremont street to Massachusetts avenue, and thence to Columbus avenue, through Stuart street, to Washington street, School street to Beacon, to Arlington and up Huntington avenue to Massachusetts avenue and St. Botolph street to the Boston Arena.

Syria Temple of Boston, headed by the 372d Infantry Band, and in command of Captain F. W. Cornegal, World War veteran.

MANY TEMPLES MARCH.

Other organizations in the parade were: Arabian Temple of Chicago; Sahara Temple, No. 31, of Pittsburgh; Sinai Temple of Cincinnati; Azure Temple of Atlantic City; Constantine Temple of Providence; Pyramid Temple of Philadelphia; Persian Temple of Philadelphia; Medina Temple of New York; Ramesia Temple of Charlotte, N. C.; Mecca Temple of Washington, D. C., and Medinah Temple of St. Louis.

A $2,500 patrol drill contest in which 12 patrols were entered was held in the Arena following the parade.

DEMAND MORE CITY AIRPORTS

Washington, Aug. 25 (A.P.)—The progress of commercial aviation is making the development of municipal airports a necessity, in the opinion of W. Irving Glover, second assistant postmaster-general in charge of the air mail service.

While a number of cities in various parts of the country have foreseen the need for such and have provided them out of municipal funds on a revenue-producing basis, he pointed out that many others, including New York and San Francisco, the centres of foreign and domestic commerce on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, had not made preparations for the advancement of the new method of transportation.

Use of army, navy and postoffice department fields for commercial purposes is impossible, in most instances, because of the Government's requirements, he said, and the rapid expansion of private aviation enterprises is making the need for landing facilities urgent.

Mussolini Meets Waterloo! Can't Hide Knees

Paris, Aug. 25 (A.P.)—Benito Mussolini, Italy Fascist Premier, has met his Waterloo, or his Marne, as some prefer to describe it. If the French dressmaking trade can be trusted for the assertion.

They declare Mussolini's attempt to extend his dictatorship to what women of his country shall wear is a more difficult undertaking than suppression of the Mafia in Sicily.

None of the dressmakers believe the duce will succeed in making modern woman let their hair grow long or lengthen their gowns, when fashion demands shortness in each. Fear is expressed, however, that Mussolini may be able to cut down materially the 200,000,000 lire Italian women spend annually abroad, mostly in Paris, for clothes.

U. S. OBJECTS TO NEW LOAN BY THE CHINESE

Peking, Aug. 25 (A.P.)—The United States legation today lodged with the foreign office an emphatic protest against the proposed use by the Chinese government of the customs revenue surplus, as security for a new domestic loan to the detriment of American creditors.

The protest names twenty-one American concerns whose Chinese accounts are in arrears and reminds the government of its obligations. The legation asserts that the proposed action means further failure to observe good faith in its transactions with Americans.

The WOMAN GAME by KATHARINE BRUSH

A Story of College Life; a Fast and Furious Romance of Today

Mrs. Hamill shook her finger at her son. "Oh! so there was a girl from New York," he said to Jock.

Posed by John Seymour and June Elkins of "The Dearest Enemy" Co., Tremont Theatre. Photo by Charles O. Snyder.

Jock Hamill, at a dance with Molly, who is in love with him, becomes cool. He is tired of her. She's too easy to kiss, he thinks. Molly goes home. Jock meets Yvonne Mountford. He falls in love with her at sight. Most beautiful girl he ever saw, is his verdict.

Jack is charmed when Yvonne refuses him a kiss. She gives him her address.

CHAPTER III

MRS. HAMILL was the kind of woman who can made such remarks and, in the modern parlance, get away with them. No one ever waxed wroth at Mrs. Hamill. No man, that is. She was too altogether of gillette she had great brown eyes dark brows and lashes aston shing silver hair which she wore it in a shingle bob a great deal figure and hands as soft and appealing as a baby's. Hands to be kissed, those. Hands to be caught and held in bigger hands, intensely Hands to reach out in pretty supplication and to close tight like little white bars across what was given . . . Her age was problematical. It seemed to vary with her gowns, with her moods, with her companions, until it ran the whole scale of the years between twenty-five and forty-five.

Bobbing of 5 Out of 6 Credited to Movies

Williamstown, Aug 25—Without the motion picture, Mrs. Vernon Castle's bobbed hair would never have spread to five out of every six feminine heads throughout the land.

The movie has become a safety valve successful in keeping a regimented people satisfied to bear with the individual sterility of a machine age.

Ruth Bloch, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, made this statement.

DRY SQUAD WILL 'SHOOT TO KILL'

New York, Aug. 25 (I.N.S.)—"Shoot to kill."

That is the latest order received from Washington in the blood war on violators of the dry law. In time to the squad of 40 customs men assigned to assist prohibition enforcement officials in checking smuggling of liquor from freight ships and liners docking in New York harbor.

The order was announced just as two squads of men, members of the inner harbor patrol, returned from night raids in which they seized liquor aboard two vessels in Hoboken, but which produced no prisoners.

The customs men drew revolvers and fired, but they aimed into the air in a mere attempt to frighten the fleeing rum runners.

"Clean up the waterfront and spare no one," is the way customs officials interpret the new order from the capital.

GIRL CAN'T GET 'CAVEMAN' BACK

SPURNS OLD LOVE; WILL SEEK NEW

Roxbury Youth Says Sweetheart's 'Mean Look' Blasted Romance; but He's Glad!

"It's bye-bye for you, little girlie,
I'm goin' to have a brand new sweetie, now."
—Cavemen's Chorus.

Gaily humming songs of the foot loose and fancy free, James T. Coyne, who lost his bride-to-be by caveman tactics, which he frankly admits, today scorned a reconciliation with the girl, Miss Mary Sherman of Dorchester.

"I'm goin' to find a new sweet heart and the four years of romance between myself and Mary are now forgotten music," said Coyne, perspiring at his home, No. 31 Laurel street, Roxbury.

He declared he was happy after all that Miss Sherman returned the marriage license to City Hall, even though she did so in protest to his "he man" methods which, it developed from his own admissions, were based on the principle:

"Catch 'em young, treat 'em rough and tell 'em nothing."

"Two more days and we would have been married and not a word if I would have had said to me. "But it's all over for good and Mary knows it as well as I do. The trouble between us all began when she gave me a sarcastic look that I didn't want to stand for.

"She says she still loves me, does she? Well, what of it? She came around here last night after giving back the license but little Jimmie at her ring the bell, all she wanted while he sat watching from an upstairs window. The same thing is going to happen if she comes again."

Miss Sherman is not living at her home in Alexander street, Dorchester, according to her mother, and she was also reported to have left her recent lodgings at a Massachusetts avenue house.

BRIBERY, IN HALL CASE, CHARGED

Money Offered Witnesses to Withdraw Affidavits, Declares Detective

Somerville, N. J., Aug. 25 (I.N.S.).—A new and sinister note—bribery—entered the Hall-Mills murder investigation today.

Inspector John Underwood, of the Jersey City police, injected this new element in an announcement that he was informed money had been offered to witnesses who have made affidavits in the case to persuade them to withdraw their statements.

Underwood declined to reveal the identity of those under suspicion but said an effort was being made to trace the source of the alleged bribe offers and intimated certain action would be taken against any persons or witnesses who accepted them.

State Senator Alexander Simpson, special investigator into the four-year-old mystery of the murders of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and his choir singer sweetheart, Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, was reticent in commenting on this new phase.

Simpson expressed greater interest in two witnesses likely to be announced who, he asserts, will positively refute the story of Mrs. Nellie Le Russell one of the principal chief witnesses who recounted the story of Mrs. and Hall.

The testimony of the latter knocked as "the pig woman" was a factor in the arrest of Willie Stevens and Henry Carpender on murder charges. The rector's widow, Mrs. Frances Noble Hall, is still at liberty on $150,000 bail.

His two new witnesses Simpson said, will be put on the stand before Supreme Court Justice Parker tomorrow, when defense attorneys will make their second effort to have Stevens and Carpender, brother and cousin of Mrs. Hall, freed on bail.

Madden, Seeing President, Says War Debts Block Plans; Liggett Caller

Paul Smith's, N. Y., Aug. 25 (A.P.).—Further tax reduction must await the funding of all the World War debts owed this country by other nations, in the belief of Representative Madden, Republican, of Illinois.

Mr. Madden was an overnight guest of President Coolidge at White Pine Camp. It was during the discussion of the program which he said for the forthcoming special session of congress a study in which he has had a hand, that the conference arrived at the conclusion that no further reduction in taxes could be effected at this time.

However, Mr. Madden is most optimistic of reductions to be made only when foreign governments begin to meet their obligations.

FAVORS WATERWAYS.

At the same time, Madden issued a statement in which he defended the program of the administration and advocated the present expenditure of $50,000,000 for inland waterways so as to afford relief on the railroad transportation rates.

Another theme was for a renewal for reduction. Mr. Madden from time to time in recent years has written letters to the press urging that the country could save $300,000,000 a year in taxes by means of economy.

Among those he pointed out was $100,000,000 annually paid to the post office department. This sum, which, in his opinion, should not be used, today rests with the President's economy program. Louis K. Liggett of Boston and Representative Will R. Wood, Republican, Indiana, chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee, he was invited to discuss the political situation throughout the country.

LEGAL LIGHTS MANY U. S. BANKS

By R. C. FORBES

Are most of our bank presidents in future to be lawyers?

The two men most frequently consulted by business people are their banker and their lawyer.

One board of directors has hit upon the idea of selecting a lawyer for the presidency of one of the largest national bank west of Ti-wester.

Associated Gil; Henry M. Robinson, Los Angeles banker, of Dawes Commission fame. Cornelius Kelley, president of Anaconda, Colonel Robert W. Stewart, head of Standard Oil of Indiana; John D. Clark, president of Mid-West Refining, Haley Fiske, president of the Metropolitan Life, Charles A. Peabody, president of the Mutual Life, William A. Day, president of the Equitable Life, Edward B. Dyer, president of the Provident Life, George E. Cochran, president of the Pacific Mutual, Jackson E. Reynolds, president of the First National Bank of New York; Earl D. Babst, head of the American Sugar Refining, E. W. Marland, of Marland Oil, Walter C. Teagle, president of Standard Oil of New Jersey, and a hundred others.

Out West bankers are constantly consulted by their fellow-citizens. Their advice is sought not only on financial problems, but on business questions of all kinds, on wills, on estate on home buying, everything.

Since many of the questions call for knowledge of the law, obviously the lawyer-banker enjoys an advantage.

Receiving a "tip" from Los Angeles that E. J. Nolan, lawyer, is scheduled for the presidency of the bank merger now being arranged between the Citizens National and Trust and Savings Bank and the Merchants National Trust and Savings Bank, I button holed him in New York and pried him with questions.

"Why did you become a lawyer?"

Curiously," replied Mr. Nolan, smiling as I used to have to say, 'I will have to see my lawyer.' I got the idea that a lawyer must be some sort of sinister being. He appeared to be regarded as a mystery and, just as most boys want to dig into the inside of a watch, I decided that I wanted to dig into the inside of this mysterious thing called the law."

Young Nolan must have done his dexing well, for he is only thirty-eight. He has moved from Prosbestos, Vt., his birthplace, to Los Angeles when he was twelve. Admitted to the bar at twenty-three, he practised until two years ago, when he became active vice-president of the Security National Bank. More recently he was elected president of the Pacific Coast Casualty Company. He is a director in El Paso, who had been Mr. Nolan's law partner, and when it is understood, he will head the combined institutions.

"The young man who does not devote any time to outside affairs hims-f handicapped if he attains a position of responsibility in either banking or business," explained Mr. Nolan. "At least some knowledge of law is almost a fundamental necessity in these days of interstate commerce commissions, state commissions, tax problems, corporation problems, etc.

"The modern banker is called upon to handle trust estates, tax questions and a hundred other matters involving a considerable knowledge of the law of legal training.

"I can say from my own experience that from the first experience in handling banking questions, 15 years ago, I found many things of interesting of an. I was attorney for the Merchants National for 15 years.

There is space to add only that Mr. Nolan describes present conditions in California as very healthy, and prosperous as most anywhere.

DRY AGENTS ACCUSE ROBERTS IN BUFFALO

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 25 (I.N.S.)—Hoyt Chamberlain of Brooklyn and Samuel Fermisli, recently discharged dry agents in this district, charge in written statements that they were dismissed at the order of Rev. Roberts, prohibition administrator, because the Rev. L. E. H. Smith was investigating certain charges of profiteering public decency. Mrs. Roberts announces he will recommend the dismissal of Rev. Smith as an unfit over man at his meeting with General Andrews in September.

OFFERS JOBLESS FREE TICKETS TO SQUARE DEBT

Berlin, Aug. 25 (A.P.)—Max Reinhardt, the noted theatrical impresario, offers a novel suggestion to liquidate a debt due the city government for the latter's current tax on tickets sold to patrons of his theatres. The tax bill amounts to 72,000 marks, and Reinhardt offered to issue in free theatre tickets the equivalent of this sum to be distributed among the city's unemployed if the debt is cancelled. The proposal has been rejected by the city fathers.

WRIT BARS USE OF RADIO FIXTURE WORTH MILLIONS

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 25 (A.P.)—Federal Judge Bodine imposed restraint upon the use by the Splitdorf Electrical Company of a patented tuning system as part of a radio receiving set which was claimed to be the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric Company and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

The court also ordered the Splitdorf Company to account for profits on sales of such from the patent. This phase of the decision is believed to involve millions.

GROWTH RAPID IN EXPORTS, SAYS KLEIN

By DR. JULIUS KLEIN, DIRECTOR Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

The fiscal year just closed brought much more into striking relief the rapid growth in American exports of manufactured goods, and the immense importance of foreign sales of this class as a stabilizer in our total foreign trade as well as in our domestic industry.

Exports of finished manufactures in the twelve months ending with the preceding fiscal year by no less than 16 per cent. They were 40 per cent greater than the 1913 pre-war five years back. They were nearly three times as great in value as in the five year period before the War. Even after allowing for higher prices they are far more than double the pre-war average.

This tremendous growth reflects the energy and ingenuity of American industry and the energy and intelligence of American salesmanship in foreign markets.

The American manufacturer has not only disposed of sundry tattered scarecrows which used to startle the timid predecessors as they ventured into foreign trade, but he has a definite no-linger turns back at vague generalities regarding "slipshod American packing," "inadequate credits," "inexperienced export technique," or "inferior foreign trade financing."

These threadbare bugaboos have been most effectively dispelled by the uninterrupted expansion of the overseas markets for our manufactures. Instead of depreciated European currencies and low wages—in fact, partly because of the low standards of living which they imply—the intelligence and resourceful adaptability of the American manufacturer, backed by a firm policy as to quality in goods and services as against cut prices, have made a place overseas for American fabricated wares which bids fair to continue its ascendancy.

Quite evidently the manufacturing exporter is making rapid headway with such troublesome problems as the selection of adequate agents abroad, the planning of specialized advertising campaigns to win the aid of export advertising experts and the study and analysis of foreign markets—these deeds with a view to fitting him quite as much concern in his foreign plans as they have long commanded in domestic trade.

The record of this progress in our manufactured exports should certainly not stimulate any smug satisfaction with the past. Rivalries in foreign trade has always been contingent upon resourceful vigilance with the ever-present genuine uncertainties of Europe and all parts of the world. Nevertheless, this is emphatically the time for alert watchfulness on the part of our merchants and manufacturers.

Nor can it be said that we are simply filling the vacancy left by the collapse of European exports and wares from certain overseas markets. Our leading European rivals are making rapid strides in the recovery of their overseas trade and the analysis of these figures for 1926-27 will show them to be comparatively little in our progress which is likely to impede their own.

Ours is very largely a trade in finished goods. Our gains have been upon our predominance in necessary raw material supplies or in the production of specialties distinctly by the forces and grades distinctly different from those which could be shipped in any large quantity even by a restored Europe.

Radio Queries

Q—Some time ago I substituted a UX 200 A tube for the 201 A type detector tube in my 5 tube Browning-Drake set. Although the volume is about double, the reception is noisy and rough. When I use a 1 A tube the results are not as good as more pleasing, but the volume decreases. What shall I do? Have I used tubes?

West Stoughton.

A—The UX 200 A tube is a "gassy, soft" tube which blues when too much filament current is applied, and will not operate well in a very sensitive, but critical. Use no grid leak, try low plates voltages of about 45 volts, and see that it is fully adjust the tickler coil control. That your results give greatly increased volume and clarity over what is operating very nearly at best efficiency. Reduce the voltage slightly and this will probably clear up some of the "roughness."

Q—If the input to a spark coil is DC is the output the same?

Lynn.

A—The output of a spark coil is a peculiar, pulsating current which has a greater positive pulse or peak than a negative loop. When connecting up reverse connections until the greater spark appears. For permission to use a spark coil communicate with Charles C. Kolster, Supervisor of Radio, Customs House, Boston.

One Chill

Brings many an ill

For the sudden, clammy, chilly days of Fall—for the long gruelling Winter—be prepared with New England's dependable fuel. Do not expose yourself and your family to the dangers of an inadequately heated home.

Fill your bins now with Anthracite—proven safe, economical and the master of real old-fashioned New England Winters.

Take no chances on breakdowns with repairmen miles away. Coal is an independent, self-sufficient fuel. Your heating plant burning coal is self-contained. It depends on no auxiliary equipment for its operation. Let storms rage—wires fail—your home is secure in warmth and comfort.

MID-WEEK MOTOR NEWS

DODGE SPORT ROADSTER WINS FAVOR

MANY NEW FEATURES INCLUDED

Dodge Brothers' new sport roadster, on display in the Henshaw Motor Company's showroom, is attracting hundreds who prefer individuality.

Beauty and service are combined in the new sport roadster now on display in the showrooms of the Henshaw Motor Company, Dodge Brothers' Boston dealers.

The tan colored top, and the pheasant green lacquer of the body contrast pleasantly. The attractiveness of the car is enhanced by the polished nickel of the bumpers lamp rims, radiator shell, windshield stanchions and top bow trimming.

The cushion and back of the rumble seat, like the front upholstery, are of hand buffed gray Spanish genuine leather, constructed over spring frames to insure maximum riding ease.

The back is high and well pitched. The deck is so constructed that when the seat is folded the rear compartment is absolutely water proof, even in the rainiest weather.

"The dashing appearance and smart rakish lines of this new addition to Dodge Brothers' line," said C. S. Henshaw, "will win the instant admiration of everyone who takes pride in a touch of individuality in the appearance of the car he drives."

NEW BALANCER ON OAKLAND

Improvement of the harmonic balancer, which the Oakland Motor Car Company first adopted in its original form a year ago, is another important development of that company.

The harmonic balancer is a device attached to the crank shaft which counteracts and absorbs all tendency toward torsional vibration.

"It's a principle," said Frank Brown, general manager of the Oakland Motor Company of New England, "as best compared to a pedestrian's action in automatically and unconsciously swinging his arm in a direction opposite to that in which his leg is swinging."

A small bar pivoted at right angles to the crank shaft and with its end held by tension springs set up a counteracting force to the crankshaft.

This force is opposite and equal to the forces created by torsional vibration. The crank shaft, like the body of the pedestrian, is freed from vibration and sway.

THOUSANDS SEE LATEST ESSEX

A stroke of enterprise was shown by the Gilchrist Company when they placed the actual model of the 25-ex coach on display in the lobby of the main entrance at Winter and Washington streets. The car is being viewed by thousands attracted by the unusual position of the machine, right in the center of the entrance.

The Gilchrist Company is the first big department store on record to maintain a department for the sale of motor cars. The Gilchrist company began selling Hudson-Essex automobiles a little more than a year ago.

Commenting on the success of the first year, Charles E. Kelley, manager of the department, attributed it to the fact that "the customer real sees that everything is done for his satisfaction.

"We are approaching a very busy touring season—September," Mr. Kelley said. "And it has been interesting to me to observe the great number of people who are preparing for it by having a Hudson or Essex at the fullest of company.

"The new all-steel bodies the new process enamel finish which gives such a beautiful lustre, and the interior refinements of the Hudson Essex have attracted a great deal of attention, as is witnessed by the crowds in the doorway."

NOISE REDUCED IN NEW BUICK

Elimination of all objectionable noises was the aim of Buick engineers, when they designed the 1927 model now being shown by Buick dealers, the Nowell-Buick Company, New England distributors.

They succeeded in reducing all engine noises of an objectionable character, and in muffling the noise in the transmission. This was accomplished according to Mr. Nowell, by using an entirely new transmission for all models, which gives smooth and silent operation at all speeds. Several improvements were used in achieving these results.

Larger gears are used which reduce the pressure on the teeth. New tooth forms were designed which have more teeth in contact giving a smoother rolling action and eliminating gear clatter.

DR. POWER ON U. S. INFLUENCE

Williamstown, Aug. 25 (INS)—The annual session of the institute of Politics was practically closed here today with a consideration of the Monroe doctrine by L. S. Rowe, director of the Pan-American Union.

Dr. Rowe declared the main reason why the Monroe doctrine has at times seemed to be meaningless in Latin America is that doctrines which are in no sense integral parts of the Monroe doctrine have been made to masquerade under that name.

A nation wielding the international influence which the United States today enjoys cannot hope to restrict its foreign policy to the Monroe doctrine, he said.

KING GEORGE AND COUNCIL RENEW STRIKE ORDERS

Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 25 (INS)—The Privy Council met with King George at Balmoral Castle today for the purpose of renewing the proclamation declaring a state of national emergency existant as a result of the continuance of the coal strike.

'SUPERMAN' HAD DESIRE TO KILL

New York, Aug. 25 (INS)—Emanuel Alverson, self-avowed prodigy and student of philosophy who killed because he had the desire to kill, according to police was committed to the observation ward of Kings County Hospital today.

The youth was held on a charge of murdering James Walsh his instructor in philosophy by beating him over the head with a shoemaker's hammer in a cafeteria.

When asked if he were an admirer of Lenin and Leopold Ippenstein replied, "Why they were just ordinary individuals, but I am a superman." He showed no emotion.

SOUTH END MAN HELD ON STOLEN AUTO CHARGE

Frank Wilson, 29, of Columbus avenue, South End, alleged auto thief, was brought back from Stamford, Ct., today and arraigned in Municipal Court. His case was continued to September 1.

Wilson was arrested in Stamford because he had two kids on the front seat with him giving them a "lift." When a policeman stopped the car because of the crowded seat Wilson yelled out police names.

Then it was discovered the car was owned by Robert Sindlen and reported stolen in Boston.

Smart New Rumble Seat For Sport Roadster

Rumble seats are justly popular. They add a smart, rakish touch to roadster lines, and increase the carrying capacity by two passengers.

That Dodge Brothers Sport Roadster now provides this convenience, will be welcome news to thousands.

Like the main seat, it is deeply upholstered in gray Spanish genuine leather, and the seat back is high and well pitched, providing unusual comfort.

When closed, the rear compartment is absolutely water-proof, even in rainiest weather.

Ample space is provided behind the main seat for golf clubs, suit cases, tennis rackets and similar luggage.

Brilliant pheasant green lacquer body and hood, strikingly in contrast with the tan top, back fenders and full special equipment, complete a general color scheme of exceptional dash and charm.

TEACH THE WHOLE FAMILY TO BUDGET

How to Succeed in Keeping Outgo — in Bounds

Budget Talk No. 136
By MARTHA LEE

"I'LL tell the world Budgets are a friend," wrote a recent letter friend. "I suppose we are poor, but we don't feel poor, for we make the money go around, then go over enough to give us a few good times. Picnics, outings, people in for dinner. Inexpensive pleasures, but they tie us all in one solid knot of friendliness."

He found the plum in the pudding, the big reward for the careful saving and counting through the weeks. He's found the difference between happiness and amusement.

Write or Print Very Plainly

The groundwork of happiness goes deep into the family life. Sunshine in a home where the children are growing, the wife is contented and father is appreciated. Amusement dulls worry for a while but it only covers up the poverty of a lonely life and never quells the yearning for happiness.

Everyone must have some recreation, something to break the daily work-a-day trend of thought. Everyone can have it if he will learn to count it as a necessity and save for it as regularly as he does the rent and coal bill.

The best way is to teach the whole family to Budget. Mother, father, sister, brother and even baby with his occasional pennies. Make the Budget a family affair, each doing his part and working toward the same end.

Plan a party, a trip to the beaches, a whole day in the country, with the money that can be saved toward amusements. Have each one contribute his apportioned bit toward it.

And when the big day comes, you will have amusement, entertainment, recreation, and solid satisfaction thrown in. It gives a lot more real happiness than the indigestion you can't afford will ever yield.

If you haven't started each and every member of the family Budgeting, start right away. Fill out the coupon for a form to guide you. If you want further help in a specific problem, write it on the back of it, come and outgo, and let's see what can be done. There's always some way to get happiness in.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mrs. H. O. F., with $38.50 a week, asks for a Budget that will take care of a coal bill of $100 a year, a doctor's old bill of $70 and a dentist's bill of $40.

Such bills must come out of the personal allotment and out of spending. A $38.50 budget will allow $3.85 for savings and insurance, $7.70 for shelter, $9.62 for food, $5.77 for operating, $ 78 for clothing and $ for personal.

Mrs. E. N. B. has $18 a week to feed five and clothe three. Rent $4.50 weekly, insurance $3.60, milk $3.50 weekly. Would like to have the Budget system explained. Cannot see any chance to save.

Dear lady, you do! But see any chance to save, but I don't see how you get along at all.

Let's look things squarely in the face. You pay $3.75 for shelter. You have five to feed. The very least you can do this on is $10, and then only by making the utmost use of dark breads, cereals and dried fruits. I assume that you have no sewing expenses for your house, meaning fuel, light and gas, but must seem to be only $2 left for this week's $1.25 for clothing and $1 for personal. Of course it is plain to see that three cannot be clothed on $1.25 a week nor a house run on $3. Assume $1 $1, your personal allotment, take care of doctors and dentist.

I am sorry that the best Budget can do here seems to be to show you that some way must be found to add to your income if you are going to keep off the rocks of financial disaster.

Mrs. L. A. S., with eight in the family, has an income of $40 a week. Pays $35 rent, electricity between $4 and $5 monthly, gas $1.50, telephone between $4 and $5. Five children from 14 to 8 and three adults.

Is getting gray-haired trying to make both ends meet. Lives in a nine room cottage. Uses one ton of furnace coal every three weeks in Winter, besides stove in kitchen and dining room. Insurance $1 and $1.50 a week. Two quarts of milk a day and sometimes three.

Makes most of children's clothing and her own. Finds it impossible to pay anything on back bills. As soon as she finds the leak, will repair it promptly.

I think you are doing wonderfully well with what you have to do with. The minimum food budget for your mixed family is $17, including the milk bill and husband's lunches. It means real study to keep within this.

This leaves you only $8 for rent and business carfares, $4 for clothing, $4 for operating, meaning heat, gas, light and telephone, $3 for savings and insurance, and $4 for personal.

Coal comes out of operating, insurance out of savings.

Possibly you can scrape $1 a week out of your personal allotment to pay on the back bills. Isn't there some way for your husband to get overtime work? Outgo is larger than income.

Mrs. L. P. O. asks for a budget for $38.50. Pays $32 a month rent. Wants to save for Winter's coal. Three in the family.

The standard budget will give you $3.85 for savings, $7.70 for shelter and business carfares, $9.62 for food, $5.77 for operating, which also means the coal bill; $5.78 for clothing and $5.77 for personal. If you start putting $4 a week away out of your operating fund right now, towards the coal bill, by the time you need the first ton the first of October you will have enough saved to take care of the bill and a little over.

It may be that you will have to borrow a little each week from the savings fund to pay for the rest of your coal, but it should be repaid early next Spring at the latest. Meanwhile stick to the other budget divisions.

Here is an $80 budget for Mr. S. L. E., who, through systematic saving, since boyhood, was able to accumulate enough capital to go into business for himself last year.

Eight dollars weekly should be laid away for savings, $16 for shelter and business carfares, food $20, operating $12, clothing $12 and personal $12.

Mrs F. J. F. asks for help with a $28 a week budget. Four in the family, including three young men 18 to 26. Has rent of $7 to pay, but pays a rate of $23.70 every month; telephone $8.50 a month, milk $2.50 a week, electric light $3.50 a month, insurance $2 a month, fire insurance $50 every three years, coal about $120 a year. Accounts unpaid for and back bill of $100 to pay.

First, let's "sell" your young men, since that's probably one of their chief thoughts in life. Give them the same food allowance as an adult man—64 cents a day. Added to the 42 cents allowance for an adult woman makes $4.45 for a minimum weekly food budget for your family.

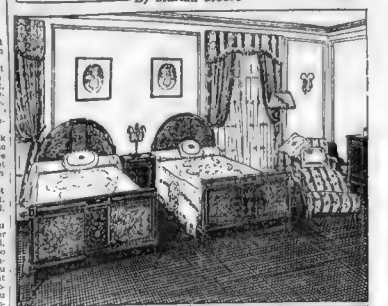
This leaves you only $10.65 to cover savings, clothing, operating and personal. Two adults, $1.50, $3.00, $14.25, $3.75 for clothing, $3.75 for operating and $4.95 for personal.

All expenses of the automobile come out of personal, as do payments on the note and the back bill. You are short under this personal allotment, and will have to borrow what you can spare from clothing and operating.

Practical Hints on Spending by a Plan

Furnishing the Home

By Marian Moore



IN this illustration we find a solution to two very important problems in the—real rest after the day's long hours; and pictures to refresh the aesthetic senses.

These French color etchings, now so popular, are especially appropriate for a bedroom, for they are dainty and decorative, and framed properly to set off their delicate charm.

Over the dresser, which is just disappearing from the picture at the right, hangs a wide mirror, suspended from the mouldings by two parallel cords, finished at the top of each cord with a tassel.

Among the countless picture subjects available for properly furnished bedrooms are colorful garden scenes, informal pictures of various kinds, gay flower pieces, or enlargements of snapshots reminiscent of past outings.

If in the bedroom, too, one is one's own personal study or library, that framed photographs of one's friends may be hung.

As a general thing, these are too personal to be placed in the family living room, in which guests and strangers are received.

The lighting fixtures in the room shown here are well placed, with a small bedside lamp, and a standing lamp beside the chaise longue, where one may luxuriously read by its light.

In the case of wall brackets in narrow spaces, such as the one shown, a small ornamental picture on plaque may be placed below the bracket, adding a pleasant touch of color and interest.

In this room, with its restful walls of plain tint, the decorative pictures are richly supplied in the pictures and draperies.

Has Budget proved a good friend to you? If so, why not "tell the world!"

Martha Lee's Pointers and Recipes

YESTERDAY I told you how the [illegible] could take her ease and comfort over the coming holiday, in spite of a house full of company. All by the simple means of having her dessert prepared hours before the day before, in fact, and thus eliminating one of the biggest problems of entertaining.

I also told some other people about it, too, and reinted the ease of making an icebox cake and the delight of eating it.

"It's all right, my dear, as far as it goes," said one privileged friend. "But it doesn't go far enough. What about the rest of the meal and the supper or light lunch? What can you suggest for the hostess who wants to tramp the woods or go swimming with the rest of the household? Dessert is one thing, but hot vegetables and meat are another.

Only too true. So I decided to give you a whole dinner that could be prepared in the morning, during the cool part of the day, and left in the ice box to chill, and then be served within 5 minutes from the time you come kitchenward. And such a dinner!

Baked veal loaf, pepper, potato and celery salad, with diced pickled beets or sliced stuffed cucumbers. Add to this a deep dish peach pie, baked in individual ramekins and served with hard sauce, or a deep dish blackberry pie, for something especially good, and what more could you want?

Baked Veal Loaf—This particular baked veal loaf is unusually tasty, and I am sure you will want to try it. It calls for 1½ pounds of lean veal ½ pound of raw ham, ¼ pound fat salt pork, 4 eggs, 4 rolled crackers, 4 tablespoons cream or rich milk, 1 tablespoon of lemon juice, 1 teaspoon of salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper and ¼ teaspoon onion juice. Put the veal, ham and salt pork through a food chopper. Add the remaining ingredients in the order given and pack into a greased bread pan. Bake 1½ hours in a moderate oven.

The deep dish peach pies can be baked at the same time for they require a moderate oven for about 45 minutes. The filling is: this calls for 4 cups of sliced peaches, ½ cup of sugar, 3 tablespoons flour, ¼ teaspoon salt. The dry ingredients are sifted and mixed thoroughly with the peaches, then turned into individual ramekins, covered with pie crust and baked for 45 minutes in a moderate oven.

A little of this, a little of that, stirred together and mixed with an indifferent dressing makes up the usual potato salad. Not a great favorite with the average family, but try the following recipe, serve it nice and cold and every member of the household will exclaim over it.

Four potatoes, 3 green peppers, ¼ cup diced celery, whites of 2 hard cooked eggs, ½ cup stuffed olives, boiled salad dressing, ½ cup parsley and 1 head of lettuce.

Wash the potatoes clean and cook in boiling water until tender. Peel and cut the potatoes into dice. To these add finely chopped green pepper, diced celery, and serve on crisp lettuce leaves. Garnish with the finely chopped celery. If you have any whipping cream on hand, take about ¼ cup of whipped cream and add it to the salad just before serving. It makes a delicious addition.

Labor Day parties furnish the right time and place for stuffed cucumbers. For red tomatoes it is, as tomatoes are growing bigger and tougher on the vines every day, and it won't be long before we must say goodby to them for another year, that they are delicious right now, and one of the most piquant varieties of the cucumber dish is to serve our friend stuffed, and thinly sliced.

STUFFED CUCUMBERS — Slice off both ends of 1 medium sized cucumber and then cut in half, carefully scooping out its soft centre. Stuff with 1 package of cream cheese which has been seasoned with ¼ teaspoon of salt, and ½ tea spoon of pepper, and worked until creamy.

When it has been filled and packed down as closely as possible put it away in the ice box with the rest of the dinner. Slice in thin slices just before serving.

And then forget food for a while. Not for a very long while, however, for people will get hungry three times a day, and the harder they play, the more they want to eat. But please remember that true hospitality no longer begins and ends with groaning tables piled high with food.

A hot chowder and a plate of corn bread, served with a real smile and blessed with a hearty welcome, count for more than the most elaborate meal. And your friends had rather eat out of tins than have you spend hot, tiresome hours over the stove.

Faithfully Yours,
Martha Lee

Clean Jars

for canning and preserving

Every housekeeper knows the importance of absolute cleanliness when canning and preserving—the slightest impurity in a jar is enough to cause trouble.

To be sure that clean jars are scrupulously clean, put them in a solution of baking soda, either ARM & HAMMER BRAND or COW BRAND, and boiling, using two teaspoonfuls of soda for each pint of water, and then boil thoroughly.

This is only one of innumerable uses that make baking soda a necessity not only in the kitchen but all over the house. Both well-known brands of baking soda are made by Church & Dwight Co., Inc., and both are the same—pure bicarbonate of soda, helpful every day in many ways—get a package today at your grocer's.

A Thrilling Story of Night Life and Night Clubs; a Mad Whirl of Adventure

CHAPTER XXXIII.

BRIERHALTER stood regarding her with a speculative eye.

"Do you remember what I told you the first time I met you?" he asked in a cool voice.

"I said you were the one woman on earth for me and that if you were tied up with anybody else you'd have to get yourself untied. I meant just that. Must you always persist in branding me as a criminal because I happen to have the resources to disregard the customary rules and go after you any way I can? I believe men have been doing that sort of thing since Jason's proms of them were considered rather heroic figures too."

Joslyn's voice sank to an icy level. "I've never been shady like your hero—did you ever read Byron's work like chivalry . . . or honor?"

"Most of them frequently, but more often as mere words than actual deeds," he assured her. "I am quite familiar with both words and I find they are very much over rated. But I won't quibble. I have certain cards in my hand and I intend to play them. I expect to win, that I shall, that's my purpose. I'm desperate. You asked about Kelvin. Suppose we get back and I will tell you about him."

Around Joslyn's heart surged a fearful fear that Kelvin's very life was in immediate danger. The horror of the deal numbed her, broke down her infuriated desire to flee from Brierhalter. Her love—if it was love—for the only man who had ever thrilled her to the core underwent a change in this, his hour of peril. The physical magnetism which had been so overwhelmingly potent had resolved itself into thin air and disappeared. What she felt now was obscurely maternal — a heart-crushing yearning to protect to save him at any cost, any sacrifice.

"You know I won't give him up," she asserted. "You know that's the only way you can reach me—through Jim Kelvin." She moved in surrender back into the richness of the living room.

"All is fair," declared Brierhalter, "in love and war."

"Don't call it love!" she returned. "You don't know what love is. But you've got to tell me about Jim Kelvin—what have you done with him?"

"Nothing so far. My man have him."

The incongruity of kidnaping a man hammered in Joslyn's brain, filling her with jarring dread. The thing seemed so grotesque and yet she knew by the deepest intuition that in this at least Brierhalter was not deceiving her. The man had already proved himself capable of anything.

"If you are holding him," she tried to argue, "you're heading yourself straight for prison. You had better let him go. Your own men—men who'd do a thing like that—will betray you. You can't trust people like that."

"If you are holding him," she tried to argue, "you're heading yourself straight for prison. You had better let him go. Your own men—men who'd do a thing like that—will betray you. You can't trust people like that."

"All of Which I Thought Out Carefully," He Remarked

"All of which I thought out very thoroughly before your suggestions," he ran on confidently. "What you don't understand is that those fellows have been in my employ for years. Also they have a code—and their men they're not riffraff. For the most they know that it would be decidedly unprofitable and unsafe to do business with me. Yes, I have highly trained specialists—and no greenhorns. Not the rabble but the capitalists. You have no idea how many investments they have kept up also for me."

Joslyn listened aghast. That so rich power for evil could be controlled in one man's hands filled her with sickening helplessness.

But I don't discuss these things with—over—somewhere," Brierhalter went on. "In fact, you're the only one who knows. I'm quite safe in talking to you. You would be a fool to make damaging and even fatal attempt to repeat what I've told you and you'd only be the fool for your pains."

She looked at him, her face straitened with the bitterness of anguish. "Where is he?" she asked in a voice scarcely above a whisper.

"He is, as I told you, safe—for the present."

"For the present—but later?" Brierhalter's expression was unfathomable. "That, he stated, depends entirely on you."

With great effort she managed to steel herself steady. "Would you turn him over to the police?"

"No, I think not."

In the look hurt of her mind lurked fear that she feared not to find in plain words. Yet she had to know and she nerved herself for the direct question.

"Would you set them. . . ME him?"

Brierhalter, despite his stony calm, shrank a little at the brutality of the question and he lit a cigarette to cover his minute hesitation before he answered.

"Men who have never hesitated to remove other men who stood in their path if he said lewd. "Done in a wholesale way in time of war it goes by the name of patriotism and glory. The whole thing is a matter of viewpoint. But I would not say that I would cause Kelvin's life to be taken, although I could easily bring that about. No, I think the worst part I would be responsible for would be his permanent escape. That's rather vague, but you know what I mean. He would just be—gone."

Joslyn grasped the arms of her chair with fingers of iron. "What is the best," she asked determinedly "that you can do for poor Jim?"

"I could put he's fate in your hands. If he desires to escape it could be arranged and in addition he could be supplied with considerable money. Or, better still, perhaps, he could be acquitted. The best lawyers could be hired, the best evidence—manufactured. I would leave that to you."

Her face went lividly white. "And on condition that——"

Brierhalter choked out his cigarette in an ash tray. "If you come with me," he said, "I will have everything that my entire fortune could provide. You will enter a new world than you ever dreamed of."

The Peacock Girl :: Disdainful and Aloof, She Is the Eternal Magnet :: Drawn By Dorothy Flack

PROUD—disdainful haughty this peacock among women! Yet more than that, and perhaps because of it, ALLURING!

She holds her head erect and preens her feathers because she is secure in the knowledge that she need not pursue. What she seeks—admiration and devotion—will come to her as surely as a bird soars toward the clouds. She is the everlasting magnet, drawing toward her irresistibly every force in the world of men, and holding these forces by the sheer power of attraction.

The striking beauty of the peacock of old strutting for all the world to see, will be as nothing when compared with the evanescent, spiritual beauty of the peacock molded by love into submission and peace . . . or will it? Poesy and oratory omit things not essential and insert little hateful digressions in order to reach every thing in the most affecting light.

'The Woman Game,' New Thriller

Jock sat down as she had directed, greeting the three men each in turn. They were frequent visitors to the house and he knew them all well—Saunders Lincoln, of the iron-gray hair and the still-athletic figure, so particularly well that he had called him "Uncle Link" and received from him rather breath-taking checks at Christmas almost ever since he could remember. Uncle was here merely a term of familiarity, how ever, Saunders Lincoln was not a relative. "Why don't you marry him?" Jock had demanded of his mother on a former occasion, and had learned that he was already married to, and separated from, a woman who, on account of her religion, would not agree to a divorce.

"Marriage," Mrs. Hamill had added "is a mistake for some of my temperament, anyhow. I'm too fond of men to give up all."

That was quite true. Her Utopia was a world peopled solely by men with be self a gorgeous goddess before whom all did obeisance—not too impersonally. She could not bear woman and women, of course, could not bear her. She made young ones feel too young, wrinkly, raunchy; and older ones anxious and faintly antagonistic.

"When's college start up again, Jock?" asked Saunders Lincoln now. "I'm leaving tomorrow, sorry to say."

"Not anxious to get back, eh?"

"Not at all no."

"Jock," announced Jock's mother casually, "is a liar. He's quite wild to get back, as a matter of fact. I'll bid one no trump."

That was the signal for all conversation to cease, so Jock had no opportunity to debate the point. He sprawled in his chair, staring at a highball that had been handed him, and followed the play languidly with a half-a-glance. Presently he took a pencil and began to scribble on the back of a bridge-score. Thus absorbed him for some moments, after which he left the room, taking the paper with him. It was a poem to Yvonne, a poem beginning, "Oh voice that sings a song in the night. For the wind to carry forever——"

Upstairs in his own quarters he read it aloud to himself. Then he said Pink rather sheepishly, and called it "Ode to a Strumpet."

Later Mrs. Hamill ascended the stairs and tapped on his door; she found him stretched out across his bed in a fantastic green-and-black dressing gown, reading.

He grinned sociably at his mother. "Rover Boys gone home at last?"

"Yes, they've gone."

"Good game?"

"Excellent, except for Henry Barlow. The man is a perfect bit wit and persists in leading from the ace while my fronting and bidding principles are notorious. She seated herself on the edge of the bed, took one of Jock's cigarettes and smoked it thoughtfully. "What's on your mind, Jock?"

"Nothing."

"Nonsense! I knew there was something. the minute you came into the room."

Jock remained silent, and Mrs. Hamill after a long silence at him, concluded that she must by indirections find directions out. "Have a good time at the dance?"

"Oh, so so."

"Who's Molly?"

"A friend, I guess. She went home with a lot of girls."

"Who was there?" she inquired. "The usual mob. And—and a girl from New York."

"Red Hair," Said Jock Succintly, "Oh," He Added

Mrs. Hamill was quietly triumphant. "Oh, so Molly went home at ten o'clock and there was a girl from New York!" she shook her head reprovingly. "Jock dear, must I remind you that ninety-nine per cent of this world's happiness has bands are gentlemen who permitted themselves to be caught on the rebound?"

"I'm not 'caught'," Jock protested, but without conviction.

"What's her name?"

"Yvonne Mountford."

Between Mrs Hamill's eyes there appeared a wrinkle—promptly erased, because wrinkles are vicious fibers with a tendency to whimper where they're put. "That name sounds familiar," she mused, "but I can't think—well, what does she look like?"

"Red hair," said Jock succinctly.

"Oh."

Jock got up, with a conclusive air of having disposed of the topic to everyone's satisfaction and began to pace the river-lettered bowl of his pipe with tobacco. "Now?" he said. "How about my allowance for this year?"

She mentioned a generous sum. Sums in that household were always generous. "That's the berries," approved Jock. "But can you afford it?"

"I think so."

"It's a lot of money."

"I have a lot of money, Jock," said Mrs. Hamill. "More than I can spend in myself."

Jock knew that this was so. Had you asked him where the money came from he would doubtless have said "Father," or something vaguely like that. It did come in large quantities, he was well aware. Yvonne was not again mentioned in the conversation. But when Mrs Hamill, who goes to her own room and was seated before her dressing table gazing at her reflection over a corpse of assorted bottles and jars, she remarked to the mirror: "Yvonne Mountford. Now where have I heard that before? Bye and bye she noticed, "Poor Molly."

Mrs Hamill had more than the usual maternal devotion that if she were younger, and if Jock were not her son, she would be violently and utterly in love with him since she could sigh, at time, for girls he did not know.

He leaned sallows on the ferry boats and contemplated New York as he approached it. He was thinking of many matters, of Yvonne of college. The boat bumped up at a landing. Jock headed his roadster uptown. Yvonne's apartment house was an imposing one on Park avenue. Jock reached it at twelve-fifteen exactly, and having reached it, drove away again with only a momentary pause at the curb. He had decided that twelve-fifteen was too early.

Twelve-twenty-five found him at his own University Club, hailing a jovial ruddy cheeked individual with marked enthusiasm. "Pink, I have Lord, I'm glad to see you! How's the boy?

Didn't expect to see you till four," chattered Pink. "Wasn't that what you wired—four o'clock sharp here in the lobby? Say, by the way I ran into Dopey Lane and Bill Olmstead down in the grill a while ago eating to beat hell so they could catch the noon train, and I told 'em to wait over and you'd take 'em down too in your bus. Home you've got room."

"Plenty," said Jock promptly. "It's a roadster, but it's held ten in its day. Might as well make this a good trip——"

"Sure," agreed Pink. "That's what I thought. Drink and be merry for tomorrow we compulsorily repel. Well, ole hoss, what kind of a Summer did you have?"

Exchanges of confidences Pink's somewhat lurid, Jock's of a more coolly restrained, occupied the next hour. Then Jock got into a road ster again and returned to the house. From believing twelve-fifteen was too early he became panic-stricken for fear one was too late. His relief when I the switchboard in the lobby announcement house told him Miss Stountford was in and expecting him approached ecstasy.

Jock's pals are introduced in tomorrow's chapter of "The Woman Game." You'll want to know what they think of girls.

Making of a Husband

By Ann Lisle

"HERRAY" someone called. "She's all right there. She's got the sense to know Tarasov is all to the good."

"You bet he is!" I shouted thelessandy.

Again there was a laugh. Vaguely I noticed that Jim had taken his place at my left, and that McCandless was drawn up just behind Jim. It seamed that they might be planning to protect me in case I angered the mob.

"But at the time I knew if it had been Tarasov's shadow it would have been long tail—al. the way across the studio floor, so May would have noticed it. And I knew Tarasov wouldn't stoop or sneak. So it came to me then that it was a little shadow—the shadow of a little person. You see how easily that could be little Arietta, straying at a highball that had been handed him.

Nick Parry would know about it because that was the day he took her to town to buy her clothes for the wedding and the green suit. And later, when Arietta and Nick stopped in on the way home, she told me they were such pretty clothes she could go on a honey moon of her own.

"Why didn't you say so before?" some one called.

"Who did she elope with?" some one else yelled.

"Was it a city guy?" shrieked a third.

"Say—let's go home," drawled an other voice with an amusing yawn at the end of his words.

There were shufflings and stirrings. Healey and two or three others drew aside for a whispered conference. A circle of men surrounded McCandless. And then—like ghostly shadows the men began slinking away into the woods behind the clearing. Their feet scuffled along the ground for a while. Their voices drifted back, but after a few minutes only snatches of laughter coming back on the clear night air gave evidence that a little while before there had been as many as two score angry men gathered in the clearing demanding primitive justice and insisting that crime had been committed.

"They're gone." I breathed.

"Sure," said McCandless. "It's almost time to go home and start the morning ploughing."

"Then it's all over." I cried. "Out! Like a candle in the wind—"

CHAPTER LXI

(Copyright, 1926, Jonsson Features, Inc.)

JENNY and Derrick came over for supper on Sunday night.

They never came near the house unless Mrs. Hedlinger happened to be away on business, for Jinny still disliked her grandmother as much as she had on the long ago day when she had obliged with Derrick to run away from the house.

They came also on Monday, from Mollford where they lived in a cozy bungalow, and then brought over sandwiches with them for Jenny and Merry. It all had a holiday air also as two rosebuds, with blue eyes and yellow hair.

At twenty-three Jinny looked years older than Merry. She was just as slim as always, and just as snappy and full of energy. But there were tired lines in her face that betrayed how she burned the candle at both ends.

"We were out until 3 o'clock last night, playing poker," she said to Merry with a yawn.

"Would never guess who was over at the Smith's party, Merry," she went on. "Muriel Kaufman and that handsome husband of hers. My soul! But he's a hulu. Why didn't you marry him? He was crazy about you, wasn't you?"

Merry only shrugged her should ers. She hardly knew Muriel and Cabby Marsh a thought. Her mind was full of the one thing it had been full of all day long—the thought that Tony Gattles was coming back to town and that she would have a chance to see him. Just to see him.

Even though he was married even though eight years had passed, it was going to be Heaven to see him again, just for a minute. Heaven and Purgatory, too.

Muriel's beginning to look as tough as she looks leather, and she drinks like a fish," Jinny remarked.

Then she began to sweep the keys of the piano with the first soft chords of "How I Miss You To night."

All at once, Merry's hands came down over hers, and crashed on the keys in a discordant sound.

"Play some jazz, for the love of Pauline!" Merry said in a sharp hysterical voice. "Don't play that painful thing!"

Her throat was quivering like a bird a throat, and to Jinny's amazement, she put her bright and shin ing head down on the piano and began to cry.

Jinny began to put two and two together, and thought she had the answer.

"I suppose you and George Lost have had a quarrel," she said.

Merry knew that George Lost had been calling up to Merry every day for a week or three—ever since this was Sunday night and George was out of town. Of course, it was natural enough for George Lost to call up Merry. She must be lonely, and George was the only man she knew in town.

"Never mind Merry," she said with a comforting arm around her sister's shoulders. "I never could understand George Lost. He's not a bit like you. He's much too much of a sissy-boy. But you anything, you'll feel every

What Are You Studying?

HISTORY, mathematics, literature, languages, science? In your whole curriculum, there is no lesson more important than how to guard your health. Long after your hard-won French vocabulary is forgotten, you will be putting into daily practice—if you are wise—the rules of health.

School work, with its continual studying, its sports, dances and social affairs demands a vigorous body. How discouraging it is to miss the good times. And sometimes, how unnecessary.

First of all, then, learn the lesson of health. Find out what fresh air will do, exercise, sleep and proper food. Many school girls have learned that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped them to find the health they needed and has made their school days happier.

"I gave my fifteen year old daughter, Louise, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She had been out of school for four months. I read the advertisements of the Vegetable Compound, and since she has taken it she has improved and has gone back to school again. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be."

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

A NEW YORK man is building a home with several novel features. One of the innovations will be a dressing room where he can go and worry about the mortgage.

WHEN the interest money is coming due he likes to have a place to sit and wonder where he's going to get it.

HE saves the wear and tear on the carpets by not having to pace up and down in the parlor.

IF he has a room of his own, he doesn't have to go crazy all over the house.

IT'S wonderful to have a place where you can worry at peace.

ANOTHER feature of this man's home is a private room in the attic where his wife can have hysterics without disturbing the rest of the family.

THE drapes are made of absorbent cotton so that she can dry her eyes on the curtains.

INSTEAD of using handkerchiefs she cries into a big basin which is connected with the plumbing.

IT has a capacity of fifteen hundred tears an hour.

THE room also has smaller basins in case she only wants to cry a little bit.

HER husband figures on saving the tears and using them for watering the garden.

INSTEAD of oak or pine, the wood work is weeping willow.

THE owner of this house also has three guest rooms where the company is made as uncomfortable as possible.

BY giving a guest a hard bed it stimulates his desire to sleep at home.

THE fellow is smart. He's doing away with long distance calls by putting a telephone booth in the parlor.

HE'S also having "Stop Lights" installed on the dining room table.

A RED light flashes every time a guest asks for a second helping.

DAILY SHORT STORY

WHILE Larry Scott was making an effort for the possession of Sue Lee Riley's hand, he chanced to read an article which told, "How To Win the Girl You Love." Its sincere note struck his fancy. At once he determined to experiment with Sue.

Friday evening he called upon her, and plunged into a discussion of the type of girl appealing most to men. Something not very cordial in Sue's manner of listening somewhat shattered Larry's confidence.

"Don't you think I'm right?" Larry asked her frankly.

"Perhaps," Sue Lee said quietly, looking him straight in the eye.

Larry stopped abruptly and cleared his throat. He glanced at Sue Lee through half-closed lids. She merely said, "Go on."

"Well, someone has said that women's place in the world is the home, her object being to pursue and marry the man of her heart . . ."

"Um-um" said Sue.

Larry noted her attitude and hastened to amend any injury to his cause.

"I don't think it any discredit to a woman, either, that she tries to fulfil her purpose in life!"

"You are real flattering to my sex, Larry!"

"I was just speaking personal thoughts," he said blindly.

"Poor man," purred Sue Lee, "just think what envy he is for woman. Ladies go out and hunt men just to accomplish their purpose in life. Poor men!" Sue yawned.

The sarcasm was point-blank. Larry laughed not because he felt happy. There was an unusual twist to Sue Lee's smile and a twinkle in her eye that made him uncomfortable.

"The point is," Larry explained, "that since woman's highest purpose in life is to marry—she should be honored and looked up to if she does try to catch a man. If she succeeds in making him love her, he should feel highly honored!"

Sue seemed provoked by these statements. She cupped her chin in her hands and gazed steadily at him.

"Mercy! How well you know women, Larry. How come!" she demanded.

Larry tried to appear worldly-wise. "I guess you don't get my meaning. I'm not trying to say women are designing creatures, vicious like . . . I mean . . ."

"You're extraordinary, Larry," Sue laughed coldly.

The boy felt a wicked hatred for the author of that article. It [illegible] working out like he thought. Perhaps he had not used the information correctly.

"Now, see here, Sue Lee. I'm not talking in the personal, get me." He cleared his throat. "Anybody knows you are different from most women. You wouldn't pursue a man—that is—"

"I suppose, then, I am a disgrace to my sex," she said wilderingly.

"Still you don't understand me. What I mean is that if you ever did condescend to pursue a man you would get him!" Larry tried desperately to break down Sue's reserve, but her sense of understanding seemed far beyond his reach.

"Good grief! What a mixup!" he thought as he strolled home in the moonlight, determined not to call on Sue again.

At the end of two weeks the world began to look a little brighter. Larry had seen Sue Lee on the street and she had smiled and spoken to him.

"Oh, Larry," she asked, "aren't you playing golf any more? I've not seen you at the links lately."

"Been too busy—that's all." He was talking like a great man of affairs. He'd show her he was somebody, not just a sentimental fool!

Couldn't you go out with me this afternoon and play a two-some?" Sue Lee looked so small and wistful Larry had never seen her so demure, so sweet.

"I guess I could." Larry faltered as if it meant little to him whether he played or not. He had not forgotten all about the article he had read. A place in it said, "Do not be masterful with them."

That afternoon after a very poor game on Larry's part Sue Lee suggested they go over beyond the green and sit in the shade.

They lolled on the grass and Larry proceeded to absent-mindedly dig a hole in the soft ground with his mid-iron.

"Speaking of women," began Larry.

"Of which we were not speaking at all," interrupted Sue.

"Well, that was the difficult subject of our last conversation, if I remember rightly. Gee, you were peeved."

"It isn't very gentlemanly to talk about women when you are with one, is it?"

"When you are with THE woman, you can talk about all other women and it doesn't matter. Especially if a man thinks about one woman so much he can't sleep or eat."

"Mercy! How that woman must pursue you, Larry. Tell me about her."

Larry paid no attention to Sue but tapped the ground fiercely with his club.

"Pursued right into his den," Sue Lee tormented."

Larry looked up at that. "See here, Sue Lee. For once and for all will you marry me?"

"Marry you?" She seemed astonished.

"Yes, me. I'll never ask you again. Never forget!"

Sue Lee saw his riding color, and knew he was serious. She did not know that he was frightened almost frantic. He waited, breathless while she gazed off down the links and let her eyes rest on the blue horizon.

Larry felt she was going to say no. His nerves became tense. He wanted to cry, or laugh, anything rather than stand there waiting.

Then Sue Lee turned her head and looked squarely at him and smiled a funny little smile.

"Some here Larry and give pursue her engagement kiss. Didn't you come right out and ask me to marry you . . . other night I was only teasing, saying you like that. Mean, am I?"

"You're a darling, Sue Lee." He held her close.

"See," she explained "I was angling for a romantic proposal—and I got it, Larry, at last!"

He kissed her squarely on the lips, and swore silently at his folly.

HOW TO THINK RIGHT

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

"As a man thinketh so is he," said the leader to a class of little boys. "That means that your thoughts influence you so much that you finally act according to the thoughts that you have held in your mind."

"Well, how can anybody help thinking?" asked one small boy. "You don't try to think. The thoughts just come to you."

"That is what people have been believing all these years," replied the leader, "until somebody decided that it was possible to put bad thoughts out of your mind by filling it up with useful thinking."

"Tell us how to make our minds think right," requested a bright-eyed boy.

"All right. Every one of you think, now, about what you would like to be when you grow up."

For a minute every little lad in the room seemed absorbed in his own thoughts. Presently the leader let them tell what they had decided.

"While you were thinking about your future work were you thinking about anything else?"

The answer was, of course, "No."

"Tonight when you go to bed," he suggested, "you hit upon some subject that you like to think about —what you did at camp last Summer; the good time you expect to have when your best friend comes to visit you; the kind things your father and mother said to you when you brought home that good report. And keep right on thinking about that pleasant thing until you fall asleep. Then nothing else can come into your mind."

Throughout the year, that leader showed those boys how they could think right; how they could debar destructive thoughts from their minds.

He also proved to them, by numerous instances, that thinking the same thing over and over again will eventually result in doing. And they found out for themselves that the things they do are the actual result of the things they think.

Thoughts are forces. Good thoughts build up, bad thoughts tear down. Then why not set the proper forces working for your child while he is little, so that he will not have so much to undo when he is grown. It is easier on him, during adolescence and infinitely easier for him to succeed in the end.

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By Helen Rowland

THE rustle of a silk petticoat was once a part of woman's subtle charm; but it would take more than woman's ingenuity to get a "rustle" out of a one-piece bathing-suit or a pair of knickers.

* * *

The average man's heart, like a dog, is forever fancying that it is being "called" and running off in answer to every imaginary whistle.

* * *

Many a man who says, "I am what the Lord made me," is unconsciously crediting the Almighty with a very keen sense of humor, or awfully poor judgment.

* * *

A woman fails in love head-first; but a man merely "puts his foot in it," and then is astounded to discover that he can't "pull out."

* * *

A "permanent wave" lasts only until new hair grows in—but then, "eternal love" lasts only until a new interest creeps in.

When it comes to making a choice among girls, these days, every man feels like a small boy in a lollypop shop, with only one penny to spend.

* * *

The surest way to awaken a man's interest in ANYTHING, from a new play or a new idea to a new girl—is to begin denouncing it.

* * *

A man's heart is a fearful and wonderful thing. He can meet a woman, fall in love with her, and marry her, all in the same week—and then spend the rest of his life in leisurely hating her.

* * *

The saddest thing about the life of a modern girl is that she has to chaperon herself—to be her own little match-maker, self-advertiser and ballyhoo-man. She has taken over the job of "chasing Charlie," which used to be done so gracefully and skilfully by Mother or Mrs. Worldly-Wise—and is making a fearful bungle of it.

* * *

Woman's idea of life is a DUET—a man's is a SOLO, with a very faint feminine obligato.

Love:—An electric spark struck out by the contact of two unisulated vanities.

RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

SOMETIMES a hint of loneliness comes creeping through the hours to shadow all they bring of joy, to veil their fairest flowers, to cast across the shining day a fleeting film of doubt; but there's a way as wise folks know, to shut these shadows out. When loneliness would take its place, a spectre at your side, grant it no room to linger there, no moment to abide; but summon from the years gone by all sweet and friendly things, all treasured bits of kindliness to which the memory clings. Take all of merriment and good that daily ring you round; take little, foolish laugh and jest, take happiness profound and build of them a shining wall to bar the ghost away, the plaintive ghost called Loneliness, who comes to mar your day.

HOW good it is to wake on Summer morns and find the Earth so fair, to breathe the freshness of a world new-made that perfumes all the air! Is is as though within this garden-plot still lingered Heaven's kiss, as once in lovely Eden where man dwelt in innocence and bliss. How good it is to know, as Earth renews its splendid bloom each day, man, too, can wake with morn to fairer things, can cast old cares away! He can take up the thread of life anew and weave it as he will into a fabric better with each day, with each day fairer still. How good it is to know on Summer morns Earth's joy in not the whole, but that an equal source of good renewed waits ever for the soul!

* * *

DON'T ever be afraid to do the very best you can, for Earth has never failed to laud this spirit in a man, and even though the years should pass with virtues unproclaimed, your best will bring its own reward although unsung, unnamed. As day by day men toil and go, of low and high degree, the men who never pause to think just what their best might be, the world goes eagerly along upon its endless quest, still looking for the sort of man who always does his best. Although the tasks may seem but small, they come to fill your day, remember that it can be done in but one honest way; don't ever be afraid to do the very best you can, for that's what looms the largest in the making of a man!

Home Hints

There is no difference, so far as the food value is concerned, between the white-shelled and brown-shelled egg.

A goose should be plump, but not too fat, or the flesh will be coarse.

A turkey can scarcely have too much basting; otherwise it is apt to be dry.

Gooseberries should be trimmed, washed and dried. Then place them into wide-mouthed bottles, and bind a rag round each bottle. Place them in a large wide pan of cold water, and stand this over the gas until the water boils. Take the bottles out, and on the following day fill them with boiling water. The berries must be covered with the water. Now pour in a little salad oil. Cover securely with bladder, and keep in a cool dry place. Do not disturb the bottles until the berries are required for use.

VALENTINO'S LIFE STORY AS HE TOLD IT

tional calls, sailing blithely off to win riches in America, reaching America to experience the grilling poverty, loneliness and utter misery which break or make, from these depths suddenly arising a few years later to the finest place a man could occupy —a place in the esteem and affection of the American public— when I view that self of myself I feel I haven't even a speaking acquaintance. And I wonder how men can write autobiographies that disclose their character and feelings, since the man who you were yesterday is a stranger today.

But I can speak with confidence of the real heroic character of my story. The character of my mother. A boyish, back-haired, black-eyed little woman, so gentle. She had met suffering in her early youth. She with her parents she endured the terrors and privations of the siege of Paris. She was the daughter of a learned Parisian doctor, Pierre Filibert Barbin. My father, Giovanni Guglielmi, a fine romantic figure in the uniform of captain of Italian cavalry, won her heart and brought her to the family home in the little village of Castellaneta. I was born there at three o'clock in the morning of May 6th, 1895. And shortly after I was taken into the church to which my mother had belonged and christened most solemnly Rudolpho Alfonso Raffaelo Pierre Filibert Guglielmi di Valentina d'Antonguola. No matter how poor an Italian family may be it is never without a shortage of names. The real surname in our particular line-up is Guglielmi.

A DUELLING ANCESTOR

My mother used to explain very carefully how I came to catch of these names. It was a matter of great importance to her. "Rudolpho Alfonso Raffaelo belongs to your father's house," she would explain. "And the Pierre Filibert you inherit from your grandfather, my father. The di Valentina is a papal title and d'Antonguola indicates an obscure right to certain royal property which is entirely forgotten now because one of your ancestors fought a duel."

Ah, that ancestor!

He was an evil influence over my young life.

This ancestor Guglielmi was a brave fellow, according to legend, which undoubtedly grew in value as it passed down the generations. He had the courage—or imperfection—to get into a quarrel with a member of the Colonna family, one of the finest and oldest of Rome. It was, of course, a beautiful Italian lit affair, as all Italian stories are. My ancestor killed the Colonna and was forced to flee from Rome.

Another romantic story, somewhat more authentic although dated from about 1850, when Ferdinand di Bourch ruled over Naples and Sicily, states of the old Italy long before the little town of Martini, France.

And of the massacre which ensued. Again my ancestors took light. This time they settled in Corsica, Italia, their only property the tattered clothes they wore.

No doubt these stories led me into my first adventures and undoing. It is to me a strange sensation to look back on the first retrospect. It has the just retribution that comes to all cinema sinners.

I owned a gun which shot deadly wax bullets. One morning after a hot dispute I turned the dastardly weapon upon my sister, Maria, who was by no means a beautiful young woman. She gave valiant battle, when my supply of ammunition gave out I took flight to the neighbor's property. There I hastily climbed a lime tree and commenced to utilize the unripe fruit against the enemy, who was beleaguering the tree with stones and sticks. I fired a couple of rounds—and then one of them hit my father's study window.

MARIA'S ALLY

Father was at home and he soon made his presence known. When I saw him I knew that he was emphatically the ally of Maria. He carried his cavalry whip. I was no George Washington, nor was my father at all like George Washington's blameless sire. He administered a brilliant lecture yet not without heart interest. For when I looked up through my tears I saw the whip had retired from action, I saw the tears in his eyes. He led me by the hand into the house, and there impressed me with a little talk which was far more effective than the whip. After this scene of Latin emotionalism I never used the gun again. It showed me that I was not behaving like my ancestors, but more like the brigands who drove my forebears out of Martini, France.

I did not court another encounter with my father for several months. He was a quiet, studious man, deeply absorbed in his profession, that of a veterinary doctor. There had been four children in the house, Beatrice, Alberto, myself and Maria. But Beatrice, the eldest, died when I was very young. Alberto, the next in age, was two years my senior and far too important to associate with me. Thus Maria and I became partners in nefarious undertakings. I used to think that I led and Maria followed, but now, looking back with the wisdom of years, it would appear that Maria did the leading. At least she led me into a lot of difficulty.

Our house was a typical Italian farmhouse, square, flat-roofed built of heavy white stone, its thick walls broken by casements with heavy blinds that are closed and barred at night. On the main floor was the great living room, the dining room, kitchen and my father's study. Attached to the house was formed about the courtyard in the rear were the servants' quarters and the stables.

My mother held my father's study to be a sacred place where no should intrude, because of the terrible fascination for Maria and me, with its books and microscopes and curious instruments. I also had a pipe—a long-stemmed, fleshish pipe.

CORN-SILK CHARM

As a flash—back to this episode I must present myself and Maria in the middle of a forbidden period in the barn. I had learned the secret charm of corn-silk and had generously introduced it to Maria. Occasionally when I had saved five centimmes—that is about 1 cent—I buy Virginia cigarettes. Maria did not give me any more credit for smoking these growing pains than I did she did for my enterprise with the corn-silk article, and the pipe became my natural objective.

One afternoon when my father was out we entered the study and took the pipe at rest on the table. I made an instant and feverish attack upon the bowl. Fully conscious of Maria's awe-stricken attention, I inhaled back and drew great puffs as nonchalantly as possible. To heighten the dramatic effect and to impress Maria still further with my daring, I placed my sire's sacred spectacles astride my nose. Maria was impressed. I noted with admiration as I lolled back in the great chair, and puffed away at the pipe while I blew forth great, astonishing clouds. It was not long, of course, until I began to experience weakening and my complexion going. Certain that a disaster impended I placed the hallowed pipe on the table.

Almost simultaneously the huge black eyes of my father filled the doorway. I nodded pleasantly to him, though I was in great difficulty. He had his physician's eye upon my face and I knew it was telling an awful story. "I—I—I—I'm very well, Papa," I said. "I think I ate too much fruit this morning."

But the confounded smoke kept spiraling out of the pipe on the table, my father's cane seemed to shout its intentions from the corner. From a hero in the sublime spectacle I had stepped down to a moment previous, I soon became the wretched principal in the most ridiculous and awful of scenes.

FATHER DIES

When I was eleven years old my father died, and he died in the city of work, and he died for it. There had been many deaths among the cattle of our district, and my father, in line with the work of Pasteur in Paris, was studying among them for a method of checking the epidemic. He finally diagnosed the disease as tuberculosis, and then malaria had been considered as a disease peculiar to the marshes. Suddenly we knew that people contracted malaria through bites of mosquitoes, but that cattle and human beings were infected the same way. My father spent months testing his theory, and then many months more working out a formula for a vaccine that would end the epidemic. As a result of his protracted labor he fell ill. Ten days after the sickness had attacked him he called us to him and told us that he had only a little while to live.

Calling Alberto and myself close, he took down the crucifix from the wall and gave it to me. His grave, black eyes were glowing. Firm, gentle, but he spoke firmly and his words were those of the captain of a cavalry troop.

"My boys," he said, "love your mother and above all love your country."

My hands shook and great tears suddenly fell on the trembling crucifix. That evening I sat alone with my heart with a solemnity that I had never before known and have never since experienced. It was the first great grief. And always I will say—the words: "MADRE IS ITALIA."

ADVENTURE BEGINS

My mother was stricken, she never wept. In the silence between them —my mother and father—was without understanding, something beautiful and sublime. I saw, for the first time, a great, true love.

I tried to be a very good and dutiful son after my father's death. All of us, Maria, Alberto, and I, loved our mother to distraction. We vied jealously to serve her. And I would try to kiss and embrace her exactly as I used to see my father do. My manly attitude was too stern however, for my eleven years and soon dropped away. It was decided that if I were ever to be a gentleman, I must be sent forth to school. For a year I struggled through the course at Dante Alighieri College, which corresponds to a grammer school here. I came out of it on my thirteenth birthday and then entered a military academy.

Life again was in rainbow colors, promising adventure and plenty of gold. My favorite work of literature at that time was "The Adventures of India." Even the author of that book could not invent romances as fine as those of my imagination. I grew quiet and dreamy on the outside, but I was seething with adventure within. I was becoming a knight, explorer, rescuer of hundreds of fair and persecuted ladies. No one could ever see my dreams within the secret confines of my soul.

From a child it had been my great ambition to become a military officer. The position of an Italian cavalry officer is a very fine one. Most of the officers are of noble family the flower of the land.

Truly a Grand Old Man

The Generation Now on Its Way Will Not Look on Dr. Eliot's Like Again

In the realm of the mind, Charles W. Eliot long ranked as our first citizen.

He put education in touch with life; he made Harvard a vital influence; and in his own way of living he exemplified intellect on the heights.

He had, too, touches of acetic humor. But he preferred instruction to entertainment.

The generation now on its way will not look on his like again, for the type is disappearing.

Valentino

He Made a Useful Contribution to Life

Few deaths in history have commanded a more widespread sense of loss than the demise of Rudolph Valentino, but yesterday the screen favorite of millions—and the day before yesterday unknown.

His quick rise from obscurity to dazzling fame, wealth and romantic appeal makes a story comparable in human interest with any that the screen itself has carried.

Yet the first "movie" ever exhibited before paying spectators was dancing a grotesque xigong on a common bed sheet in Koster & Bial's Music Hall only thirty years ago.

Today, in 20,233 picture theatres in the United States, an average of 130,000,000 admissions view weekly their preferred players perform as if in the flesh, and soon will be listening to their voices as well. The year's output of film which spreads this magic visualization would belt the earth ten times.

Valentino happened to be one of the fortunate ones who got caught in the focus of this amazing development.

But he had the courage and ability to force the success that followed. There was no accident about it, once his opportunity came. He picked the type of appeal toward which his aptitudes inclined and developed it by untiring work and an abounding faith in his art and in himself.

It is no mean achievement in so brief a time to have been an agent in introducing romance, thrills and some degree of an unvoiced appreciation of art into the lives of countless millions scattered in all parts of our world.

If the tantalizing love smiles now frozen on the lips of the departed screen sheik gave moments of pleasure and caused millions to turn to the printed stories of the characters he played, he did his part.

Screen actors who by acting great literature bring it to the masses make a useful contribution to life. Rudolph Valentino did this and it entitles him to respectful memory.

Wherein Baldwin Miscued

Britain's Premier Evidently Not Immune From the Tory Complex

When Britain's Premier cabled here that no striking British miners were starving, he began the debate to which Lloyd George, in last Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser, so quickly and ably leaped.

Why, then, does Winston Churchill put on the ex-Premier the whole burden of blame for carrying the issue to "vast foreign communities"?

America, the world's largest reservoir of philanthropic funds, to which British solicitors of aid had appealed, is properly interested.

It may also be added that any American of intelligence enough to have an opinion worth considering can easily determine where lies the truth.

A million British miners with 3,000,000 dependents, poorly paid at best, cannot be idle for many months in a country already burdened with unemployment without experiencing acute distress.

How many may have actually starved is beside the point.

The present Premier of Britain is not a mean-hearted man. On the contrary, his impulses are generous. But he evidently is not immune from the Tory complex.

He could hardly have understood the interpretation the common man would place on the spectacle of the executive head of a great empire reaching his voice across the sea to defeat a mission of mercy by his own countrymen in behalf of millions of other countrymen in direst need.

Life's Span Still Brief

Along About 70 the Wise Man Prepares to Meet the Inevitable

The span of life—that is, the length of time it takes the human machine to run down—remains about where it was in King David's time—three-score years and ten.

Dr. Serge Voronoff, the renowned rejuvenation expert, claims that the natural term of life is one hundred and forty years.

He says that horses and other animals live seven times their maturity, and that why humans die so soon is because of the conditions under which they live.

He declares that rejuvenation operations could be made several times, and that he has in all rejuvenated six hundred persons.

It is possible to rejuvenate an old man, but the trouble is that he is liable to die even when he is rejuvenated. Proper physical training can take the stiffness out of his legs and give him an apparent youthfulness, but some fine day he drops dead.

The trouble is that a man is just as old as his heart and his kidneys.

If you go along in a quiet and undisturbed routine, you will last quite a number of years, but over-exercise in old age is a dangerous thing.

We all y[illegible]t to live as long as we can, but along about seventy, if n[illegible]der, a wise man begins to prepare to meet the inevitable distant day.

FORENSICS DEVELOP YOUNG MEN

By DR. FRANK CRANE

An earnest little book has fallen into my hands called "An Outline for Self-Education."

One of the points given most stress by the writer is the value of forensics for developing young men.

Most of America's self-made men, from Benjamin Franklin to Abraham Lincoln, have testified to the benefits they received from debating.

Ever since, and probably long before, Bacon wrote that "speaking maketh a ready man," the value of argument as a sharpener of the wits has been recognized.

Besides this, the study of debating does a number of other things.

It teaches where to find information. It drills in the important art of knowing where to seek. Its training in where to find facts you are looking for helps in everyday life later on.

It trains students to give attention to details. It demands a challenging of every accepted and seemingly guileless point that may harbor a fallacy. It requires an exact definition of terms and a clear understanding of what is included and what is left out.

It cultivates orderliness. It requires that weeds be kept out of the garden of the mind. It demands straight rows, solid foundations, consecutive links. Facts must be marshalled one, two, three.

It inculcates the invaluable lesson of seeing the other side of an argument. The surest man in a debate is always the one who knows the other side best.

Moreover, it gives training in seeing from another's point of view. In trying to get an idea across to a listener the speaker gets training in putting himself in the other's background and seeing the problem from his viewpoint.

It also gives exercise in expressing yourself, putting your ideas into words, and making your thoughts clear to others.

In a debate you have a test of your ability under conditions where weaknesses are made apparent and results are evident.

Earnest young people who are striving for self-development can do few better things than following this writer's advice to join a class in forensics at night school, extension work, or Y. M. C. A. classes.

SPOILING YOUR PLAY TIME BY OUTBURSTS OF TEMPER

When you lose your temper at your favorite game do you become enraged to the point where you would like to break anything which you use in your sport?

In your business and workaday life many exasperating things come up, but you have learned to master your emotions.

During your play spells you are more likely to become wrought up and your nervous system put out of tune.

You are tired and disgruntled after your game, your digestion suffers, and you feel the effects of the strain.

How foolish to spend your leisure, your play time, in such a way.

What does the winning or the losing of a game amount to in your life?

Real sportsmen desire to win—that's true—but there is no place for temper in a true sportsman's game.

Take the breaks of a game as you do the breaks in your undertakings.

Don't spoil your recreation hours by allowing yourself to fly into a passion.

When you are out for fun, why do that which robs you of enjoyment?

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

ALYCE is seventeen.

Vivid, restless, eager, impatient seventeen, with little feet jigging on the threshold of life and merry, dauntless eyes daring Fate.

And now she wants to know what I would ask of life if I were her. If I could know all I now know, if I could foresee all the tests and triumphs which life inevitably brings to courageous spirits, what would I ask as a gift to prepare me for the long journey?

Beauty? Health? Courage? Wisdom? Charm? A canny understanding of human nature? A good disposition? Would I ask for one of these if I could have my choice?

No, Alyce. If, knowing what I know now, I could have my choice of that which would help me most through life, I would not ask for any of these gifts.

I WOULD ASK FOR THE POWER TO FIND PLEASURE ALWAYS IN COMMON THINGS.

That wasn't what I asked when I was seventeen.

I wanted dazzling tidal waves of joy and great, thunderous, romantic tragedies. I wanted the day to start and end on crashing chords.

Simple pleasures? Common things? I was fed up on them.

I was a country girl and when it comes to simpleness and commonness, life was nothing else but—

Sunday school picnics to Garden Springs—

Clambakes on the beach—

Chocolate sodas at Hawley's—

Rides with my beau in Duffy's best hack (he sure and be back by ten)—

Hours in the hammock under the blossoming apple trees—

A new pink organdie dress for Easter Sunday—

"Simple country joys" — what lovely copy they make for tired city readers, but what dreary living for impatient little country girls!

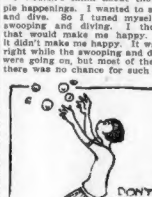
I was impatient. I wanted to be out and away, looking for high spots of life.

So the time came when I was out. And there it all was just as I had desired—glamour and glisten, dazzling tidal waves of joy, great thunderous, romantic tragedies.

There it all was, waiting for me to take my share. And I took it, you may be sure. But I made a great mistake, I took it.

I was so tired of commonness that I never wanted to see it again. So I turned away from the fact that most of life was still common, despite my tall expectations. The mountains and abysses were there to be sure—but in between them lay long stretches of homely, brown plains, filled with simple happenings.

I wouldn't think about the simple happenings. I wanted to swoop and dive. So I tuned myself for swooping and diving. I thought that would make me happy. But it didn't make me happy. It was all right while the swooping and diving were going on, but most of the time there was no chance for such lofty gymnastics. Most of life was plain living for me as it was for everyone else. And because I had lost touch with the magic and beauty that is hidden in plain living I had a pretty hard time of it until I came back to earth again.



So I'm warning Alyce (who won't remember a word I'm saying) that the greatest gift is the talent for finding joy and content in the common happenings. If you have that, you'll always be on the winning side of the game, little sister. You will still know the dizzy joy of mountain tops and the swooping thrill of the abyss. But in between times—and most of life is in between times—you'll have a song in your heart that will cheer you and send you along. And that is the best gift of all.

EXPLODING RADIO WEATHER MYTH

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"We hear quite often in these days the assertion that the radio activities are to some extent responsible for the coolness of the Summers during the last several years. Could it be that the electric energies roaming at large all around our earth would interfere with the natural earth magnetism, which might have some influence upon the normal activity of the air in regard to heat radiation from the earth, or perhaps, make the air less penetrable for the heat from the sun?—S. J. S.

THE public mind is full of such speculations, and no wonder, in view of the fact that so "scientific" a person as Paul Painleve, known as a mathematician and less confidently as a statesman, has lately been giving utterances in France to similar suspicions directed against the world conquering "radio."

Such suggestions are most likely the product of the general bewilderment caused by the unprecedented achievements of wireless telephony combined with fragmentary and undigested knowledge of electrical science.

Figure a person of more imagination than knowledge or discretion sitting down to think over the possible consequences of filling the earth's atmosphere with mysterious "waves," vibrating through the included ether, penetrating even "solid" matter and capable of being at any point instantly transformed into soft or swelling, gentle or thundering sounds that seem born out of nothing.

Pass Through

And these waves pass through and among one another in all directions, some with no interference, but some apparently conflicting and uttering the shrieks, groans, whistles and screams of maddened demons racing invisibly through the air, or getting caught and tortured in the radio boxes.

Let him think of the fact that hundreds or thousands of sets or systems of these electric vibrations are passing around, or even through him as he sits meditating in his chair, each carrying its message, and each being perceived and translated or transformed into speech or music somewhere by somebody—by himself, if he will but turn a button.

Might he not wonder that his nervous system and his brain are not thrown into disorder and utter confusion by such a multiplex torrent pouring through or raging about them?

But if his brain is not affected by the unperceived tumult, what greater probability is there that all nature will suffer from it, or that it will create thunderstorms and floods, or turn a promising Summer cold?

For every phenomenon there must be not only a cause, but a sufficient cause. Before anyone could affirm with reason that the activities of radio have tended to produce the relative coolness of recent Summers, he would have to show a demonstrable connection.

But those who now make such affirmation are merely guessing. They have not even a good case of coincidence to show. They have not the slightest evidence of sufficiency in the cause that they suggest.

Total Energy.

Let them compare the total energy involved in the transmission of radio messages with that expended by nature in a Summer's thunderstorms. Do the ripples playing over the surface of the sea affect the great storm waves and surges?

Could the vibrant energy that responds to the impulses of a singer's tones imprison the forces of a tornado and transport them into another hemisphere, there to be let loose again to wreak destruction according to its nature?

I do not question that immense energy will eventually be transmitted electrically, without wire connection, from one part of the earth to another, passing unseen, unfelt, over and all around us. But even when that is done I should not expect to find the seasons altered by any other than the regular causes that have governed them since the earth has been habitable to man.

We may continue to listen to the world's best music produced in the world's best music centres and transmitted to the remotest corners of all the continents and to the Pacific isles without the slightest fear that the power that scatters the blessing will turn June into December, or, in any way, disrupt the kindly atmosphere.

'You Said It, Marceline!'

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "BEFORE AND AFTER"

"IN LOVE
There is ALWAYS ONE WHO KISSES
And ONE who HOLDS THE CHEEK,"
Says a French maxim,
And it seems that,
BEFORE MARRIAGE,
THE MAN does the kissing,
But AFTER marriage
It is HE that gives the "cheek,"
In other words—the
"APPLE SAUCE."
BEFORE marriage
A man SELDOM KNOWS
What he IS GETTING.
AFTER MARRIAGE
He seldom knows
What HE'S GOT.
Only that it is DIFFERENT
And NOT so dumb,
And INFINITELY less
BEAUTIFUL,
And IT ARGUES. . . .
But he thinks blandly:
"I'LL SOON CONVERT HER" . . .
MOST men when they MARRY
Have LOTS of NERVE.
But MOST WOMEN know
HOW TO KILL IT!
